Constitution, and NRA Reflating Tires, and Money

September Begins Work Still Killing Witches

—By Arthur Brisbane—

YESTERDAY WAS "Constitution Day." One hundred and forty-six years have passed since the Constitution of the United States was adopted after long discussions, and the settlement of jealousies more bitter than those that mark the present efforts to settle NRA codes.

In honor of the day, the distinguished George W. Wickersham, who was attorney general under President Taft and head of President Hoover's national commission on law observance, is filled with gloom and worries about the Constitution. "We have the NRA functioning as a virtual dictatorship," he says. He thinks that President Roosevelt has abrogated the Constitution, made it a scrap of paper.

President Roosevelt might advise Mr. Wickersham to read Francis Bacon's essay number forty-two "Of Youth and Age." Bacon says:

"Men of age object too much, consult too long, adventure too little, repent too soon and seldom drive business home to the full period, but content themselves with a mediocrity of success."

Bacon says also: "Young men are fitter to invent than to judge; fitter for execution than for counsel, and fitter for new projects than for settled business."

The average American will think that if the Constitution could stand the Civil War, plus the Great War, plus the stupid throwing away of tens of billions of dollars, that same Constitution will be able to stand the NRA which is nothing more than an earnest effort to make conditions better quickly instead of waiting for the slow process of time.

W. R. Hearst, talking over the National Broadcasting Company's nation-wide hookup, made clear the difference between "inflation" and "reflation." As financial matters stand, the government is like a doctor that has a patient wide open and can't quite decide to sew him up again. We have been kicked off the gold basis and nothing has been done to make up for that loss in the dollar's value.

"INFLATION" is like blowing up a tire till it bursts, whereas "REFLATION" is like pumping a reasonable amount of air into a tire that has gone flat.

Our dollar tire is going flat very rapidly. On Saturday it dropped to 66.97 cents on the world's markets.

Not January, but September, really begins the new year. Summer ends, Labor Day comes, next Sunday will see the end of daylight saving time, except in Chicago where the exposition wants it to last longer.

The vacation period is over, the fall and winter of work and opportunity are here.

Lucky the man who concentrates on his own job, determined to make THAT a success, whatever else happens. And, alas, lucky the man who HAS a job.

In an isolated African village, seventy-one savages have been sentenced to imprisonment for horribly brutal treatment of two women, a mother and daughter, accused of "witchcraft." The outrages perpetrated, which cannot be described, were made "necessary" by the natives' religious superstitions.

In another part of Africa last January, sixty natives were sentenced to death. They killed an old woman for "casting a spell over a man's wife." The sentences were commuted.

It is not so long since tens of thousands were tortured and burned for witchcraft in Europe, in the name of religion. Even New England did not escape the curse. Untold misery throughout the ages has been caused by men, superstitiously cruel, taking literally, as the word of God, the passage: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." If God said witches must not be allowed to live, then, of course there must be witches and to kill them was a pious duty.

When a man with a low forehead and thick neck goes into a ring with another like him and knocks the other out and becomes "heavyweight champion," everybody knows him and thousands will gladly pay to see such "heroism."

In St. Louis, there have been mysterious deaths from sleeping sickness and the United States public health service announces that "three unidentified scientists of St. Louis have submitted to bites from mosquitoes that previously had bitten diseased

Jean Harlow Weds No. 3 at Dawn on the Desert

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 18 (INS)—Jean Harlow, the screen's glamorous platinum blonde, swept through the midnight skies with Harold G. Rosson, 38, ace film photographer, on a romantic airplane elopement to Yuma, Ariz., where they were married at 1:30 o'clock this morning by A. E. Freeman, Yuma's "marrying justice of the peace."

It was her third marriage and Rosson's first.

And then, even before the people of the desert country were awake, the happy couple winged their way back to Hollywood with Allen Russell, private pilot known as Hollywood's "air cupid," at the controls. They reached United Airport at 7 a. m. Russell has piloted numerous Hollywood couples on the Yuma marriage-knot dash.

"I Am more interested in a cup of coffee than I am in my honeymoon plans," laughed Miss Harlow as she stepped out of the plane.

HUNTS UP MOTHER

"And I want a shave," said Rosson.

So the famous bride set off for a coffee stand and the bridegroom started hunting a barber shop.

There was no one at the airport to meet the returning elopers. They had parked their little automobile there before starting for

2 Women May Run for Mayor

NEW CUBAN PRESIDENT TO QUIT

MRS. BARRON, MARY WARD MENTIONED

Possibility That One of Them May Win as Tangle Deepens

In the scramble for mayor of Boston, the possibility that a woman may win the coveted post loomed today as anew feature of the race.

Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, Boston attorney and former member of the school committee, was seriously considering entering the contest, the Boston Evening American learned.

Miss Mary Ward, Dorchester municipal committeewoman, says has been thinking it over for two or three days.

With no less than 15 men in the race, many women think the time is ripe for a woman to run and that the chances of success for the fair sex are bright.

Politicians admitted that either Miss Ward or Mrs. Barron, and others not yet mentioned in connection with the contest, could get enough votes to worry most of the men candidates, and very possibly enough to win in such a race as the present one.

Mrs. Barron, who is the mother of two children, said she would announce her decision within a day or two.

"Repeated requests from various sections of the city, from representatives of various civic and communal groups, urging me to run for mayor make it necessary that I consider this honor at length before announcing my decision," she said.

Chairman John W. Newman of the Democratic city committee today announced that he was calling all Democratic candidates to the Parker House Friday evening, each to show cause why he should not retire from the contest.

"No individual Democratic candidate in this contest is bigger than the party," said Newman.

"If those whom the committee calls upon to get out, don't get

U. S. ACTS TO EASE CRISIS IN HAVANA

Troops Fire on Reds; Americans Boycotted; Riots Break Out

Havana, Sept. 18—Following a secret conference with United States Ambassador Welles, Provisional President Ramon Grau San Martin predicted today that a solution of Cuba's political crisis would be reached before the afternoon was over, and indicated that he might surrender the presidency.

Receiving the foreign press, Dr. Grau San Martin, appearing fatigued but smiling, declared that "the person who occupies the government is misportant. fulfillment of the revolutionary program is the principal thing."

His prediction of a solution of the crisis came as labor troubles were increasing and as Americans throughout the island were described as "terrified" under the threat of new strikes.

RIVAL FACTIONS UNITE

"All non-political sectors are collaborating with the government in an effort to bring about a harmonious solution, the prospects for which are bright,' the President told the foreign correspondents.

"The Menocalistas, the Mendietistas and the ABC are studying various proposals and will present their solution this afternoon, at which time I am most sure that an agreement will be reached."

At Manzanilla soldiers broke up a Communist demonstration with rifle fire. Army officials announced there that they intended to act energetically against Communist leaders, attempting to seize mills. No casualties were reported in the Manzanillo brush.

The American consul was informed that Communist agitation throughout the entire province of Oriente centered in Manzanillo.

BOYCOTT AMERICANS

The general strike called there by the labor federation began at 6 o'clock this morning. The telephone, light and other American companies were boycotted, and residents who disobeyed the boycott were threatened. U. S. Destroyer No. 141 arrived there this morning.

From Santiago additional troops were sent to Manzanillo.

Added to all these troubles was the problem of 800 former army and navy officers barricaded and besieged in the National Hotel for a week. They insist that Grau San Martin step down in favor of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, who in mid-August followed Gerardo Machado in the presidency.

The American Navy— and Foreign Advice

ACCORDING to a London dispatch, Sir John Simon, the British Minister for Foreign Affairs, is much displeased at President Roosevelt's decision to begin the building up of the American navy to treaty strength — that is, to equality with the British navy.

If Sir John's expression of British displeasure in this regard fails to prove effective, the dispatch intimates that the British government and the Japanese government will, with great reluctance, be compelled to build up their navies, too.

In voicing these sentiments, the astute Sir John runs true to British as well as to Japanese form. The British, like the Japanese, willingly enter into treaties with the United States to limit and reduce armaments for two reasons:

First, because the diplomats of Great Britain and Japan never fail to bamboozle American diplomats into subjecting the American navy to most of the limitation and reduction for which these treaties provide.

Second, because the British and Japanese governments have learned by experience that: Having ratified a treaty of limitation and reduction, the United States will not build up to treaty strength.

This is exactly what happened after the Washington Treaty of 1922 and after the London Treaty of 1930—Great Britain and Japan continued to build within treaty limits, but the United States failed to build within treaty limits.

THIS wisdom on the part of the British and the Japanese, and this folly on the part of the United States were the subject of one of the last London, Sept. 2 (AP)—A message from President Roosevelt was delivered to Prime Minister MacDonald at breakfast today by American Ambassador Lindsay Norman H. Davis.

Its nature was not divulged, but it was thought to comment Roosevelt's decision regarding support in principle for a French armaments supervision plan as a preliminary to arms reductions progress, in the project Mr. MacDonald placed before the Geneva disarmament conference which will reopen Oct. 2.

Mr. Davis went alone to the residence of these nine ministers, who returned from Scotland last night.

Davis left shortly before noon for Paris to engage in conversations with French and British representatives.

I expect to remain there three or four days before going on to Geneva," he said.

CAHILL ALIVE, HOME SOON, HIS FATHER DECLARES

Says He'll Appear in 24 Hours; Is Missing Only Because Scared

Into a sudden, new direction the search for Harry P. Cahill, 45-year-old ex-cowboy, wanted in the slaying of Peggy McCarthy, 10, of Somerville, switched today following a clue given police by Cahill's father.

Through an underground channel which he declined to reveal, the father, Thomas P. Cahill received authentic word, he said, which he believes will bring about the appearance of the sought-for son within 24 hours.

The elder Cahill's information was conveyed to Somerville police and state detectives when Dick Mayo, Warren L. Richardson was going on the air through Station WNAC, at 12:30 noon, with the first of four radio appeals for the people of the nation to aid in ferreting out the ex-cowboy.

"I can not tell you what this clue is," Cahill's father declared to the Boston Evening American excitedly, "but I am hopeful that it will lead to the production of my son back in Somerville."

ALIVE, FRIGHTENED

"I want to see my boy back here because I am sure he can clear himself in this affair. I am hopeful the information will lead us to him, but I am telling myself, of course, to a disappointment. Not that I expect a disappointment but one never can be sure.

"The information reveals that my son is alive.

"Another thing! I have information—a witness with whom I have talked—that will clear Harry just as soon as he comes back here. All his movements on the day the McCarthy child died were coincidences, and when he comes back home, I am sure he will prove that.

"My son, with all this publicity, is merely staying away because he is frightened."

Police began also today a search for the man believed to have been with Cahill when he left his

GUNS BRISTLE AT BAILEY TRIAL; JUDGE GUARDED

ALL SEARCHED ON ENTERING COURT IN URSCHEL KIDNAPING

Secret Service Man Stands Below Bench; Desperado and 11 Others in First Test of New Law

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 18 (INS)—With the courtroom and environs bristling with machine guns, Harvey J. Bailey, notorious desperado and 11 others, were brought to trial today by the United States government on the charge of kidnaping Charles F. Urschel, multi-millionaire oil man. It was the first court test of the new "Lindbergh" abduction law.

The federal courtroom, on the ninth floor of the postoffice building, was an armed camp as the trial got underway. Elevators stopped at the seventh floor and only those with credentials were admitted.

Officers armed with machine guns and pistols challenged all visitors. Every stranger, including newspapermen, was searched.

The machine gunners, commanded the stairways and corridors of the seventh, eighth and ninth floors, and were also stationed at the courtroom doors.

BAILEY SURROUNDED

The courtroom was thronged with veniremen, newspaper reporters, photographers and court attaches when Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught mounted the bench shortly after 10 o'clock. A court attache immediately began the "Hear ye, hear ye" sing-song and the trial was on.

Without any delay the court clerk began reading the names of veniremen, 130 of whom were summoned for possible jury duty. As their names were called they stood up.

Bailey, handcuffed to Albert Bates, another notorious western "bad man" was brought into the courtroom at 10:09 a. m.

They were surrounded by 10 Department of Justice agents. Sprinkled around the courtroom were a dozen or more federal men, all heavily armed.

Bailey and Bates glanced casually about the courtroom. They surveyed their surroundings without the slightest change of expression.

Bailey, a tall, well built man of about 45 years, with black hair graying at the temples, was neatly attired in a dark suit and black tie. He was seated at the defense counsel table.

BAILEY SOBS

Bates was scatless. He is a strapping, blonde man of about 40 with a humped nose. His hair was slicked back from his high receding forehead. He wore a blue shirt and blue tie.

GUARD AT BENCH

The other ten defendants were then brought in. Three of them were Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon of Paradise, Texas, and their 21-year-old son, Armond Shannon. It was at the Shannon farm near Paradise that Urschel was held captive for nine days after he had been abducted from his palatial home in Oklahoma City. The remaining seven defendants are from St. Paul and Minneapolis and are accused of handling some of the $200,000 ransom money.

Directly below the bench sat a Department of Justice man assigned to act as bodyguard for Judge Vaught. It was the first time in the Southwest that a bodyguard had been assigned to a Federal judge.

A tense atmosphere hung over the courtroom. At the open door in the rear stood two deputy marshals with machine guns. There have been rumors that gangland friends of Bailey and Bates might attempt to kidnap someone prominently identified with the trial and hold him hostage for the release of Bailey or Bates, or both.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Mrs. Shannon seemed strangely out of place sitting there among the defendants. A former Oklahoma Sunday school teacher, she married "Boss" Shannon six years ago and went to live at his ranch in Texas.

She wore a tailored blue suit and white Panama hat. She is a middle-aged woman with nice features. Her husband sat nearby, a leather-faced, wiry man of about 50, with thinning gray hair. Their son, Armond, attired in a red-brick suit, sat glumly nearby. He is slim and boyish, looking no more than 16. He is alleged to have been one of those who stood guard over Urschel when the latter was in captivity.

GIRL PIANIST GALE HEROINE

New York, Sept. 18 (INS)—Tossed and battered by the worst storm in the history of its veteran master, the Ward liner Morro Castle docked in New York today—two days behind schedule.

Of the 140 passengers and 200 crew, more than 70 had suffered cuts and bruises during the raging storm, which swept away the vessel's radio masts and sent many of the women into hysterics.

When the storm was at its worst, Gwendolyn Taylor, pretty young business secretary of Philadelphia, went into the lounging salon, where many of the passengers had gathered, and very calmly began to play the piano.

While the gale howled and the ship wallowed in the mountainous seas, Miss Taylor played and sang.

$150,000,000 RELEASED BY ROOSEVELT

Funds for Expansion of Credit Given to Land Banks

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt put another $150,000,000 of federal pressure behind the credit expansion program today as Southern congressional spokesmen rallied for straight-out currency inflation.

The new federal funds were made available to the federal land banks by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to assist in immediate refinancing of farm mortgages held by banks whose operations have been restricted by heavy portfolios of such paper.

Jesse H. Jones, R. F. C. chairman, announced the plan as the drive for currency inflation picked up. Its strongest force since Congress empowered Mr. Roosevelt to issue new currency or devaluate the dollar. The gathering hero of cotton men and Southern political leaders again made the inflation issue one of Mr. Roosevelt's major problems.

NEW AID FOR FARMERS

Senator Thomas (D-Okla.) who telegraphed members of Congress asking their views on inflation, said the meeting will choose a committee to convey its inflation views to the President. Every cotton state is expected to be represented.

Thomas said Rep. Byrns of Tennessee, House Democratic leader, was supporting the inflation move along with 52 other members of Senate and House.

Just now the President is concerned particularly about boosting prices received by the farmer. The latest R. F. C. plan to improve the position of banks holding farm mortgages was considered a new step in this direction.

The President was busy also pressing these other federal efforts toward credit expansion:

Open market operations by the Federal Reserve Banks through which members are piling up credits available for commercial loans.

BANKS TO LOOSEN UP

The R. F. C. plan making $3,000,000,000 available to the banks for relending industry in aiding the recovery drive.

Cash expenditures by the public works administration out of its $3,300,000,000 fund.

Federal loans through such agencies as the Farm Credit administration and the Home Loan bank system.

Cash advances to farmers by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Plans of the Deposit Guaranty Corporation and other agencies to reopen closed or restricted banks as hopelessness of the case.

Important to the success of federal efforts was a disposition of the banks to lend money. The President looks for the co-operation of the banks, and Eugene Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, has predicted confidently this co-operation will be given.

18 Flee Flames in Charlestown

Eighteen persons were driven to the street by smoke and flames last night when fire broke out in the basement of a three-story brick dwelling at 231 Main st., Charlestown, spread to a building at 3 School st., and caused damage of more than $2000 before being controlled.

Starting in the rear of the cellar of the Main st. house, occupied by Charles Rotfel, the flames burned upward to the first floor, and, before firemen arrived, had burst from the rear windows, setting fire to a building occupied by Thomas Shea. Fire officials stated that the blaze was caused by rats and matches.

Chicago Fair Names Day to Honor W. R. Hearst

By Universal Service

Chicago, Sept. 18—In recognition of the part the Hearst newspapers have played in making A Century of Progress the outstanding World's Fair of all time, Rufus C. Dawes, president of the fair, announced that Sunday, Oct. 1, will be designated as William Randolph Hearst Day in honor of the publisher.

President Dawes suggested the Hearst Day program to the publisher in a letter sent to him at San Simeon, Cal., three days ago. In a telegraphic reply received by the president of the fair today, Mr. Hearst acknowledged the "signal honor" bestowed upon him and said he would be pleased to permit the fair to designate Oct. 1 as William Randolph Hearst Day.

In his letter to Mr. Hearst Mr. Dawes said:

"The hearty co-operation of the Herald and Examiner and the Chicago American in making A Century of Progress the outstanding World's Fair of all time, calls for an expression from us of our deep appreciation.

"We are very anxious in some way to show that appreciation and we suggest that Oct. 1st be declared 'William Randolph Hearst Day' at A Century of Progress. This will give us an opportunity to join with you in celebrating A Century of Progress and your part in it.

"Thank you again for the many kindnesses that you have extended to us."

Oct. 1 is the date of the first annual William Randolph Hearst marathon swim at the fair in which the publisher will award $10,000 in prizes.

Mr. Hearst and his Chicago newspapers also sponsored the annual gold cup speed boat races in the World's Fair lagoon last month, which drew the largest Sunday crowd at the fair up to that time.

The national convention of the American Legion opens in Chicago on Oct. 1 and the swimming marathon along the lake front is regarded as a splendid salute for the war veterans as they convene in Chicago.

The nation's leading amateur and professional swimmers are entering the swimming events, chief of which is the 15 mile marathon for a $6,000 prize.

The American Navy— and Foreign Advice

addresses made by the late Admiral Moffett, who was lost when the U. S. S. Akron was destroyed in a storm off the New Jersey coast.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Naval Academy Graduates' Association of New York, a short time before his death, upon "the decadence of the United States navy," Admiral Moffett said:

"Since the administration of President Wilson, our navy has progressively declined. He realized that in order to maintain his foreign policy the nation must have adequate force behind it. He therefore demanded for the United States a navy inferior to none.

"After his conference in Europe he cabled for such a navy and the Congress and the American people gave it to him, only to have it or the major part of it destroyed after 1922 when the United States was hoodwinked and bamboozled into limiting the only category in which it was strongest.

"Uncle Sam lost everything but his shirt-tail when he signed the Washington Treaty.

"WE SCRAPPED 842,000 TONS: GREAT BRITAIN 448,000; JAPAN 193,000; FRANCE AND ITALY NONE.

"We have done almost no building as compared with the other signatories to the Washington Treaty since 1922, after we destroyed most of the naval power we had.

"Japan has laid down, or appropriated for, 164 vessels, totaling 410,000 tons; Great Britain 148 ships, including two battleships, totaling 470,000 tons.

"In the meantime, the United States, faced with the growing antagonism of the world, has appropriated for the niggardly total of 40 ships of 197,000 tons.

"THAT IS LESS THAN ONE-FOURTH OF THE BUILDING DONE BY JAPAN AND A LITTLE MORE THAN ONE-FOURTH DONE BY ENGLAND.

"The British and the Japanese programs have comprised practically every class of combatant ship, and have maintained their navies very nearly up to the full treaty strength.

"In order to reach treaty strength by December, 1936, the United States will have to build 119 vessels; Great Britain 66, and Japan seven.

"Not only have we failed to build ships, but the vessels we have are all under-manned, while Great Britain has more vessles than the United States in each category in full commission, and Japan's categories are all practically built up to treaty limits and are fully manned. In other words, the United States navy is 75 per cent manned; Great Britain's is 90 per cent manned, and Japan's is 100 per cent manned."

THESE were almost the last words of the American admiral who met a hero's death when the Akron was destroyed. Every one of these words is true and their truth is known to no Britisher better than Sir John Simon, the British Minister for Foreign Affairs.

In the light of this record, the protest of the British Minister for Foreign Affairs against President Roosevelt's decision to begin the building up of the American navy is an insult to the intelligence of the American people and reveals his contempt for what he believes to be their complete gullibility.

BATTLE TO SAVE LAMSON'S LIFE

San Jose Calif., Sept. 18—Defense attorneys have announced they will use every possible means to save David A. Lamson from the gallows.

The defenders of the 31-year-old Stanford University press executive said the legal warfare would be no more intense than that waged at the trial in which Lamson was convicted of slaying his pretty wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson.

Lamson is reported to have said he was glad of his conviction.

"I'm glad, so glad, that they decided to hang me!" cried Lamson today. "Life ended for me last Memorial day, the day that Allene died. With her gone there is nothing for me to live for."

"I didn't kill her. God knows that. But my life is ended, and I am utterly thankful to those men and women of the jury who said I should die rather than go to prison for life.

DIRIGIBLES FOR U. S. OVERSEAS TRADE URGED

Elliott Roosevelt Cites Success of Graf Zeppelin as an Example

By ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT
Aviation Editor Boston Evening American

(Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American.)

Los Angeles, Sept. 17—In just a few days, or weeks, the Macon, America's largest and newest airship will be crossing the United States, to its new quarters at Sunnyvale, Cal.

This will revive discussions of relative merits of lighter and heavier-than-air craft.

The airship—now principally a gas-filled, rigid structure of large dimensions, has received a great deal of criticism, largely because of accidents believed by experts to have been unrelated to airworthiness of the ship itself.

In this country its use as a vehicle of commerce is unknown. Aside from the historic round-the-world flight of the Graf Zeppelin, made possible by William Randolph Hearst, America has had no opportunity of knowing this type of aerial transport.

GRAF FLIES FIVE YEARS

Yet the Graf has been flying on regular schedules for five years. It is now in its second year of commercial operation between Friedrichshafen, Germany, and South America.

From the military standpoint, the dirigible is considered valuable only as a scout for the main battle fleet. The ill-fated Akron and the Macon, were designed and built for that purpose.

To condemn them on a basis of impracticability or inherent structural defects would be unfair. In considering the Akron disaster it should be remembered that the men who had the greatest experience in operating large airships for the navy were not on board, but with the fleet at sea. Naval regulations require sea duty for advancement.

SERVICE TO FAR EAST

Constructive plans for commercial service to the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands, and to the Orient await only necessary legislation.

It must be remembered that Dr. Hugo Eckner has brought the Graf Zeppelin safely through 5 years of worldwide operation and that men of his experience might have saved the Akron.

Let us, therefore, look to a universal recognition of the lighter-than-air ship as a commercial vehicle for transportation over wide oceans. The airship can carry mail and cargoes safely and economically, if given a chance.

(Mr. Roosevelt in this and subsequent articles, which will appear under his name, is writing as a private individual and is not in any way to be regarded as having any connection with officialdom in Washington.—Editor's Note.)

Device to Aid "Blind Landings" Under Test

Washington, Sept. 18 (U.S.)—A program for establishing blind landing devices on 50 key fields is being mapped by the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce.

Installation will cost $500,000. An effort will be made to obtain this from the public works fund. Failing that, commercial airlines will be advised to pay for installation themselves, or seek funds, in the interest of both trade and safety, from the state in which their fields are located.

Eugene G. Vidal, chief of air regulations, said the device, a system of wireless control, now is undergoing final tests at Newark, N. J.

MEDICINAL LIQUOR PRICES GO UP AS REPEAL NEARS

DRUGGISTS SEE NEW BOON FOR BOOTLEGGERS

Shortage Makes Bonded Whiskey Worth Its 'Weight in Gold'

Virtually on the eve of repeal, Boston's medicinal liquor supply is rapidly disappearing, with a consequent skyrocketing of prices, it was learned today.

In addition there was the further doleful prediction that there would be no really good bonded liquor available for some time after repeal, and that prices would be prohibitive.

The increases in prices were cited today by Rep. Lewis H. Sullivan of Dorchester as a reason why the price should be fixed by the state after repeal.

PRICE FIXING SOUGHT

Speaking before the legislative committee which is drafting liquor legislation, he declared there should be a check on the distillers, and praised the druggists, who he said were not to blame.

Timothy Shea of Worcester, head of the medical spirits control committee of the Massachusetts State Pharmaceutical Association, declared he had no objection to the price of liquor being fixed.

According to druggists the trouble lies at the door of distillers who are withholding stocks of medicinal whiskey on the government assurance they will be permitted to rectify, or "cut" it, after repeal.

DISTILLERS HOLD UP

Faced with the prospect of being able to make from five to ten cases of blended whiskey grow where only one grew before, the distillers are releasing less and less of their bonded product.

Drug store prices have jumped on an average of $5 a case, with a further increase expected today. As a result of the shortage, One druggist declared he believed it would be difficult to buy as much as three cases of bonded whiskey in Boston.

"It probably means a new lease of life for the bootlegger," he predicted, "although his product will not be anywhere near as good quality."

DRUGSTORE PRICES

General arrangable prices per pint were quoted today as follows: Old Overholt, $3.75; Royal George, $3.50; Mt. Vernon, $3.50; Harpers, $3.50; Cedar Brook, $3.25; Gibson & Overholt, $4; Guggenheimer, $3.75; Golden Wedding, $3; Bourbon, $2.50, and King George, $6 for a fifth.

Prattling Babe -:- Turns Informer

Four-year-old Fay Gosselin only meant to be friendly when she raised her chubby hand and pointed to a closet, but it brought the arrest of her uncle, Frank J. Because a little child turned informer, Frank J. Gosselin, 37, of Franklin st., Lynn, today was tuned over to Andover police on a larceny charge arising out of an alleged $500 stock deal.

Inspectors Charles Duggan and Joseph Coyne were about to leave the Gosselin home after a vain search for the man, when his 4-year-old niece, Fay Gosselin, tugged at Duggan's sleeve, pointed at a closet door and said:

"In there."

They found Gosselin behind the door. Previously they had glanced through the apartment, and seeing only Mrs. Gosselin and the child, were about to leave when Duggan stopped to put the little girl on the shoulder. He quickly made friends with her, and then announced that as long as Gosselin was not there, he and Coyne would leave.

To his surprise, the child plucked at his sleeve and pointed out the hiding place.

HULTMAN AND CONRY MEET IN PEACE

Each Greets the Other Cordially at the City Hall

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry and Police Commissioner Eugene Hultman do it better by mail.

The arch foes met today in City Hall as they appeared for a session of the traffic commission, called by Mayor Curley. But there was none of the fiery language that has marked Conry's many caustic letters to the police commissioner, nor was there any of the frigidity with which Hultman is wont to ignore these missives.

As a matter of fact, Conry, who was the first to arrive, greeted his rival with a civil "Good morning," which was just as civilly returned—to the disappointment of some of the onlookers.

These latter were still hoping that the battle of the century might be fought behind the closed doors of the conference chamber. But with Theodore A. Glynn, street commissioner; William P. Long, park commissioner, and Christopher J. Craven, commissioner of public works, who are the other three members of the traffic commission, present in addition to the mayor, it was felt in well informed circles that there really were too many peace-makers for a first class battle.

There was hope, however, that a quiet meeting might be enlivened when the question of moving the traffic commission from police headquarters is raised. Hultman, it is known, is very desirous of this move.

Tools commonly used by house wreckers were abandoned by the thieves in an unoccupied house that is separated from that of Vaiani by the brick wall. None could be found in the neighborhood who heard the hammering that must have been employed by the novel burglars.

Tilton was left standing in Tremont st. while Alphonse went into a building to get the second-hand uniform—and never reappeared.

Bulls Battle in Farm Fire

Framingham, Sept. 18 (INS)—A $25,000 fire today destroyed Eastleigh Farms, owned by C. Philip Eesbe, on the Marlboro-Framingham line, and was climaxed by a two-hour fight between two infuriated bulls, that had to be shot.

Five horses were suffocated and 50 valuable cows and other livestock were saved as the flames destroyed the big barn, holding hundreds of tons of hay and farm equipment, the cattle barn, several poultry houses and two silos.

The owner's home, which is situated on a hill separated from the farm buildings, was not in danger. The employees' house and a carriage house were saved by farm hands and Framingham and Marlboro firemen. The blaze apparently started in the main barn.

The two bulls were released in a barnyard and infuriated by the flames, started fighting with each other. The battle waged for two hours before a stop was put to it by State Trooper William Blurton, who shot the animals with a high-powered rifle.

Rev. Isley Boone, Nudist, Quits Pulpit Under Fire

Echoes of a ministerially - directed Massachusetts nudist camp resounded today in Oakland, N. J., where the Rev. Isley Boone of the Consistory of the Ponds Dutch Reformed Church resigned while under fire because of "nudist practices."

Rev. Mr. Boone and Rev. Henry Strong Huntington of New York were the prime movers in the establishment last spring of a very select nudist camp on the 300-acre Robinson estate near Otis. Pictures and stories of the camp were published in the Boston Evening American a short time ago.

The camp is far off the beaten path. The personnel was chosen from among business and professional people whose incomes could well afford the $1000 fee.

Stoutly denying that absolute nudism was requisite in the camp, Rev. Mr. Boone submitted pictures and reading matter of the official publication of the "Burgoyne Trail Associates."

This was shown to that archmoralist, Dr. John S. Sumner of the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice, as well as to the sheriff before actual publication of the magazine, he said.

The 20,000 copies of "The Nudist" were so avidly gobbled up by the reading public at large that an additional run of 40,000 was immediately ordered, followed by a 50,000-copy edition of the second number.

The publicity given to American nudism, resulting from Rev. Mr. Boone's activity here, started many other nudist camps throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Stating that the entire philosophy of his camp was "a sound mind in a sound body," Rev. Mr. Boone said he was extremely cautious in the carrying out of his plan not to run afoul of the law, and especially to keep the actions of his camp free from all curious peepers.

The Watch and Ward society with the aid of state police sought in vain for any legal loophole by which they could force the discontinuance of the nudist aggregation.

Boone today in submitting his resignation stated to the church elders that the nudist camp was in no way immoral "but was physically and psychically healthy."

JEAN HARLOW IN DESERT BRIDAL AT DAWN

Yuma is the middle of the night, and when they had found the coffee and shave they climbed into and started off for home.

"For the time being we'll live in Harold's house in Brentwood," said Miss Harlow.

"First thing we want to do, though, is see my father and mother.

"We'll be on the movie lot back at work this afternoon."

The blonde emphatically denied that her romance with Rosson was a sudden affair.

"Why, I've known him for several years, and we've been thinking about this for the last few months," she said.

WED WITHOUT HOSE

"Last night we decided we wanted to get married right away. Because I was working on a picture, we decided on a swift plane elopement to Yuma. And here we are.

"We haven't got any plans for the immediate future, except work," said Rosson to questions concerning concerning their honeymoon.

Miss Harlow was attired in black, her velvet coat trimmed with fox fur. She was stockingless.

"I tore them getting into the plane so [illegible] them in the little Yuma cafe where we had our marriage breakfast," she explained.

And smiling radiantly, the bridal couple departed.

"How did they act on the way back?" Pilot Russell was asked as he climbed out off he "Elopement airplane."

"Did they bill and coo?"

"Well, naturally," replied the cautious "air cupid."

There was no advance notice of the wedding in Yuma. County Clerk Donald Wisener was telephoned when the plane arrived and he obligingly issued the license for the pre-dawn nuptials and then awakened Justice Freeman.

"Miss Harlow had little to say," declared Justice Freeman in Yuma. 'They seemed to be in a hurry, but neither Miss Harlow nor Rosson was nervous.

"I was particularly impressed with Miss Harlow's graciousness. She was certainly very nice and looked awfully pretty.

"They didn't announce their future plans to me."

MYSTERY IN SUICIDE

Miss Harlow's first marriage—to Charles F. McGrew, 2nd, son of a wealthy Chicago lawyer—ended in the divorce courts when he objected to her film career.

Tragedy rang down the curtain on her second marital venture little more than a year ago, when Paul Bern, film executive, ended his life while Jean was at a party. They had been married only two months when Bern committed suicide for a motive that, according to the coroner, was "too delicate to be mentioned in a formal report."

Things moved apace during the past year for the girl who was born Harlean Carpenter in Kansas City. First came the ordeal of the investigation into Bern's death, his funeral and the stories of "another woman."

Then the widow turned again to the stage and the films for solace. But she was stricken ill while making an appearance in Pittsburgh last December. A month later she was undergoing a minor operation in Chicago's Mercy Hospital.

In April she visited Libby Holman, widow of Smith Reynolds, at her retreat near Wilmington, Del.

Last June, Jean was somewhere on Cape Cod—why or where no one knows—after another visit to Libby, this time at Watch Hill. Then back in Hollywood, and work, and new romance.

JEAN HARLOW'S ROMANCES, TRAGEDIES

SHOT MAKES WIDOW BEAUTIFUL
Jean Harlow and her mother at the time Paul Bern, the star's second husband, committed suicide. Today, in an airplane elopement, she wed for the third time.

WHEN LOVE CAME IN STUDIO
Bern and his bride shortly after their surprise wedding. A few months later he shot himself to death in a mystery yet unsolved—but they were very happy.

JEAN AND HER "BEST FRIEND"
When she recovered from illness that had threatened to cut short her career, Jean was carried back on the stage by her stepfather, Mr. Bello, whom she calls her best friend.

LOVE, SORROW IN STAR'S LIFE

Romance, tragedy — high drama—have crammed the 22 years of Jean Harlow's life.

A bride the first time at 16.

A screen star at an age when most girls leave finishing school.

Divorced and married again at 21.

Her second marriage terminated by the tragic suicide of Paul Bern, her studio executive husband.

A brave return to work as success from this sorrow to achieve new screen laurels.

A midnight airplane elopement to Yuma, Ariz., Hollywood's "Gretna Green."

'HELL'S ANGELS" STAR

These are only a few highlights of the glamorous events that have crowded her career since she emerged from the comparatively cloistered life of an exclusive girl's school at Lake Forest, Ill.

Miss Harlow's rise in pictures is in itself one of the most interesting of the Cinderella tales of Hollywood.

Born Harlean Carpenter in Kansas City, Mo., March 3, 1911, Jean went to Hollywood in 1929 after her graduation.

A single role, the feminine lead in "Hell's Angels," a famous air spectacle, was the "major slipper." Miss Harlow was an extra appearing in a Clara Bow picture when she was among the girls who tried out for the part in "Hell's Angels."

Before that her striking beauty had won her instant recognition in Hollywood and she signed a contract with Hal Roach to be featured in comedies. News of the contract was flashed to her grandfather, S. D. Harlow, Kansas City, who registered pronounced disapproval. Obediently, Miss Harlow obtained a release from her Roach contract.

LOVE WITH FILM'S PLATINUM QUEEN
Jean Harlow has proved in many pictures that she knows how to love. Here she proved it again in a scene with Clark Gable. (International News Photos.)

WINS GRANDPA OVER

Months later the screen lure again seized the beautiful blonde and with the aid of her mother, Mrs. Marino Bello, she persuaded her grandfather to withdraw his disapproval and again sought a place in pictures.

After her appearance in the air drama, "Hell's Angels," Miss Harlow's services were sought by virtually every studio in Hollywood.

Hit followed hit. She became THE "platinum blonde" of the cinema with a world-wide following.

In the meantime she had divorced her first husband. She had eloped at the age of 16 with Charles F. McGrew, II., wealthy Chicago broker. Their young romance paled and after coming to Los Angeles Miss Harlow instituted divorce action, and was granted a decree Jan. 29, 1931.

THEN COMES LOVE

In the dizzy whirl of picture after picture, Miss Harlow apparently had little time to think of romance.

But romance appeared in her own studio. She and Paul Bern, the "father confessor" of Hollywood, the friend of every person in the motion picture world, naturally were thrown together.

The romance was so quiet that even close friends of the couple were surprised when they revealed their engagement by applying for a marriage license.

Bern was 42 and Miss Harlow 21. Ten days later, on July 2, 1932, they were married at the home of her mother, Mrs. Marino Bello.

There seemed nothing but happiness in store for the radiant bride.

But tragedy was just around the corner. Two months later Paul Bern was dead—a suicide.

PAUL'S LAST NOTE

Miss Harlow, hard at work on a picture, had gone to the home of her mother for the night. The next day as servant found the studio executive dead in a bedroom in his Benedict Canyon house from a bullet wound. A revolver lay at his side.

A note addressed to Miss Harlow read:

"Dearest Dear:

"Unfortunately this is the only way to make good the frightful wrong I have done you, and to wipe out my abject humiliation. You understand last night was only a comedy."

The note was signed "Paul."

Crushed by the tragedy, Miss Harlow was unable to throw any light on the motive of Bern's suicide. His friends were likewise puzzled.

For a time friends feared for the health and career of the screen actress.

However, she bravely took up her work where it had been halted by the news of her husband's death and plunged into it with the determination to forget her sorrow through hard work.

Miss Harlow was frank in telling her friends after her grief had worn away that she would marry again.

WANTS HOME, BABIES

She made it plain that her two disappointments in marriage had not disillusioned her with love.

"A home—a husband and children," was the hope she voiced.

But not one in Hollywood was aware that romance had blossomed again. For many months after the death of Paul Bern, Miss Harlow was scarcely seen in public.

In recent months, however, she had been seen again occasionally at Hollywood social events. During the last three months it was noted that Harold G. Rosson, ace camera man, was frequently her escort.

Despite this the news today of the romantic midnight aerial elopement to Yuma came as a distinct surprise to Hollywood.

Continue this interesting story of Jean Harlow's romances and tragedies in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

She was last seen in a cottage living with a friend, going up a stairway to the second floor.

Police said Miss Wilcott apparently had overheard her removal to a hospital being discussed and that this was the motive for her disappearance.

DOHERTY STOCK SALE DEFENDED

Judge Lowell in the new Federal building today heard "blue sky" citations submitted by former Asst. U. S. Atty. Gen. William J. Lewis in connection with the equity suit filed by Henry L. Doherty & Co. of New York, against eight Greater Boston men and women involved in stock transactions in 1927-28-29.

The defendants are Thomas J. McAuliffe, Swampscott; John E. Johnson, Brockton; Minnie Rosenfield, Brookline; Peter Christie, Cambridge; Louise G. Jones, Allston; William D. Dana, Boston; Samuel G. Thorner Dorchester, and Peter C. Borre, Newton.

Doherty requests that the defendants be restrained from asserting claims against the plaintiff and from rescinding any contract for purchase of stock on the installment plan.

Doherty further sets forth that his concern sold to Massachusetts residents more than $200,000 in securities of Cities Service Co. Purchasers included the defendants except Dana Thorne and Borre.

FEDERAL BANK PROBERS MEET

Asst. U. S. Atty.-Gen. Irving G. McCann conferred with Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone and investigators at the new Federal building today.

Reports stated the conference was over affairs of the closed Federal National Bank and affiliates. Investigators, who took part in the conference, have been checking up on alleged "straw" loans and other matters of the closed bank.

Neither McCann or Stone would discuss the nature of the conference.

Daniel C. Mulloney, former president of the Federal National, recently indicted for misapplication of funds of the institution, has been given until October 2 to file dilatory pleas.

The new grand jury, which is to act on the Federal National Bank case, is scheduled to meet tomorrow.

"—and, do I like my groceries! You should see me eat. Still, I'm most particular how my food is cooked. That's why I'm all in favor of electric cooking. It makes everything taste so good and nourishing. I heard Mother say that electric cooking preserves all the vitamins. I don't know what they are, but I guess I've got to have 'em to grow big and strong.

"Besides, I like to have Mother around a lot and, with our new electric range, she never gives cooking a thought once food is in the oven. Great stuff, if you ask me."

HIGHWAYS AND BRIDGES OUT IN STORM WAKE

Sunshine and mild temperatures were promised for today as Massachusetts and New England began to repair the heavy damage caused by the worst 48-hour downpour since 1878, which took toll of one life.

James Mulholland of Bradley, Me., was swept to death at Orono, Me., and his companion, Miss Doris Sherman, was rescued when their boat overturned.

The storm, which deposited 7.86 inches of rain, swept out to sea, leaving behind a trail of havoc which cannot be fully estimated until flood waters in Western Massachusetts subside.

Two Nantucket fishing boats with four men each aboard were still missing.

In the western part of the state rising rivers as early as Saturday started the tremendous toll of damage, which cannot be estimated until the flood water subside. Bridges were swept away and whole sections of roads undermined and torn up by the torrential rains and the advancing waters of rivers.

Near Williamsburg, on the Berkshire Trail, a bridge was washed away. Train tracks were also undermined.

Along the eastern coast wind of almost hurricane force added to the damage caused by the rain. Shipping was endangered and railroad schedules disrupted. Streets were flooded and ripped up by the storm, telephone lines were blown down and hundreds of autos were stalled. Heavy damage to crops was reported through the state.

Today some of the state's principal highways, especially in the Berkshires, were closed to traffic and will remain so for many days until flood waters recede and the washouts can be repaired.

SANDBAG CREWS AT WORK

Railroad service through the western part of the state is still disrupted today. Rising waters of the Ware river started to undermine the railway roadbed at Thorndike and last night volunteer workers were bracing sandbags against the oncoming flood.

Crews also worked all day yesterday at Becket, where the rails of the main line from Springfield to Albany were undermined.

The entire coastline was lashed by the storm and thousands of dollars in damage done to small craft. Shore roads were also damaged and a large section of the State highway at Manomet was washed away. The entire Cape was racked by the storm and Nantucket was isolated from the mainland when steamship service was halted by the gale. Martha's Vineyard was cut in half by rising waters of the brooks.

61 Dead, $5,000,000 Loss in Southern Storm Area

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18.—Reports from a wide sweep of territory stretching from the Virginia Capes to the Gulf of Mexico today placed the total of hurricane deaths at 61, those injured at hundreds and property damage at approximately $5,000,000.

The worst destruction on the Atlantic seaboard was at New Bern, N. C. with fourteen dead, six missing and property damage put at $3,000,000. A complete appraisal was not possible today, due to the fact that many lines of communication still are disabled. Crops and livestock were almost completely swept away.

Sanitary conditions in portions of the area are described as "dangerous." Scores of families are destitute.

Forty-five persons are known dead and 150 injured in the Tampico and San Luis Potosi sections of north Mexico and two persons were killed and several missing in southern Panama.

The greatest loss of life was in San Luis Potosi, 175 miles west of Tampico, where the bodies of 14 women, 14 children, and nine men had been recovered. All drowned when the San Jose dam broke under the pressure of the swollen Santiago river, which sent a swirling flood into low-lying sections. Military authorities feared more bodies would be found when the waters receded.

Four blocks of dwellings were wiped out. About 2,000 stone houses were partly destroyed, leaving at least 3,000 homeless.

2 WOMEN MAY ENTER RACE FOR MAYOR

out, it will be our duty to drive them out."

Newman said the whole committee of 400 members would meet in Faneuil Hall next Wednesday, the day after nominations closed, to pick the strongest man.

Newest candidate officially in the field is William A. Reilly, retiring chairman of the school committee, who is reported to have Mayor Curley's support.

MAY END INNES' RULE

He followed Senator Henry Parkman of Beacon st., who has been endorsed by former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller.

Parkman's candidacy means a battle of immense proportions between the "Independents" and the Innes Republican organization. It is a battle that may end the Old Guard influence not only in Boston Republican circles but in the Legislature and throughout the state as well.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley filed more than 5000 nomination signatures today. The required number is 3000. Foley said he could have filed 25,000 but the election department limits each candidate to 200 papers. He claimed victory.

Chairman Newman evidently counts on publicity to enforce respect by the candidates for the committee's wishes. He invited City Hall reporters to the Friday evening meeting in the Parker House. At the Faneuil Hall meeting, Sept. 27, the public will be admitted and the proceedings broadcast if funds are obtained.

MANAGERS BARRED

In his telegrams to the candidates inviting them to the Parker House parley, Newman inserted this sentence:

"Don't bring your campaign managers or spokesmen."

Generally speaking there was not too much optimism over the success of Newman's plans. Most of the Democratic candidates appeared to be standing as firmly today as ever on their right to run.

"I'm not alarmed by the situation," said Newman. "The city committee holds the balance of power and the man we select will win. The committee is not controlled by any leader or clique.

"We have the solid support of the administration in Washington."

He said that if any uncontrollable demonstration is made by the friends of any one candidate at the proposed Faneuil Hall meeting, he will adjourn the session to another city.

The disturbance caused by the entry of Parkman into the race may well be judged by a statement of ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols in reply to Fuller's support of Parkman. Nichols, who has the Innes support in his fight for election, said:

"It's a comfort to learn that the Malden bicycle rider has taken up the job of supporting Henry. It's a job that has been open since last spring. Mr. Fuller will have a chance to satisfy his craving for notoriety."

Fuller for his part characterized Sen. Parkman as a man "who won't be living his pockets with public money, or surrounding himself with a bunch of libturkites whose only interest in the public welfare is to get a rake-off from every possible source."

COLORFUL STRUGGLE

Fuller added that Parkman's entry left Nichols "a dead cock in the pit."

From all appearances, the strife between the leading Republican contenders is going to be even more colorful and spectacular than the battle among the many Democratic candidates.

The men now in the race are:

Judge Michael H. Sullivan, Frederick W. Mansfield, William J. Foley, Theodore A. Glynn, Joseph P. O'Connell, William A. Reilly, Henry Parkman, Jr., Malcolm E. Nichols, Alonzo B. Cook, Washington Cook, James L. McCluskey, John J. Connors, Curtis G. Metzler, Wesley D. Hamilton and Edward Stevens. Paul A. Collins, son of the late ex-Mayor Patrick Collins, is expected to take out nomination papers before closing time.

Bing Crosby Tells Why He's Star

Even a Barrage of Old Eggs Wouldn't Stop His Singing Now

(This is the first of a series of five articles written exclusively for the Evening American by Bing Crosby, soon to appear in his latest Paramount picture, "Too Much Harmony." The second article will appear tomorrow.)

By BING CROSBY

(Featured in Paramount's "Too Much Harmony," coming to the Metropolitan Theater, Friday, September 22.)

I love to sing—and I can thank my lucky stars that other people like to hear me!

Because, if they didn't, I'd be a mass of welts and bruises from being on the receiving end of old shoes, bottles, tin cans. But, it wouldn't stop me.

I don't think anything ever could have stopped me. I'm one of those oldtime "bathroom baritones" (since dignified by the title, "Crooner") and, in or out of the bathtub, brother, I sang.

But everybody seems to like to listen to me having a good time entertaining myself, and that's the reason I am where I am today. I never took a lesson in my life. I never consciously did anything to get ahead in the entertainment world. I liked to sing; the breaks came, and, ever since I can remember, I've had the grandest time in the world.

I'd probably be a terrible example to hold before anyone as the ideal self-made man. If it hadn't been for the breaks, I would be a small town lawyer today, struggling to pay for office space.

As a matter of fact, I was only at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash., studying law when everything began happening at once. The only extra-curricular activities I was really interested in were the Glee Club and a band a fellow student and I had organized.

A theater manager heard us and gave us a try-out. Al Rinker, my partner, had a sister, now known as Mildred Bailey, and she got us a berth in Los Angeles. Paul Whiteman heard us, and I became one of the rhythm boys.

The Grove Club followed and then the radio, all because I liked to sing. Offers to do motion picture shorts stepped up to be noticed; they brought a feature picture contract. And here I am!

WANTS TO WRITE

I hope to keep on singing all my life, and I pray that my voice holds out that long. That prayer isn't offered because of any future ambitions in the motion pictures or the air. Every happy moment I've ever had has been identified with a song, and I want to keep on being as happy as ever.

There's only one other ambition I've ever had and that's to be able to write saleable short stories—and some day I'm going to prove to myself that I can fulfill that ambition, too.

But, you're not interested in my ambitions.

You want to know the inside story of how Bing Crosby got where he is. It's an interesting story of life in the entertainment world.

MINE OWNERS MAY SWITCH TO UNIONS

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP)—Hope for an early termination of the Southwestern Pennsylvania mine "holiday" grew today with an intimation from the H. C. Frick Coke Company that it may abandon its anti-union stand and subscribe to the bituminous coal code.

Mines remained closed pending President Roosevelt's action on the code, but tension relaxed after the Frick company, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, traditional union foe, indicated sympathetic reception of the working agreement.

Thomas Moses, president, asserted "we intend to obey the law" and stressed the point that the firm is "taking no antagonistic attitude. Our attitude is one of helpfulness."

Frick's collieries are "captive" mines, supplying coal only to U. S. Steel plants, and company officials previously have insisted that the non-competitive nature of those mines differentiates them from other workings as far as the code is concerned.

Pickets remain on duty throughout Fayette, Greene, Washington, Allegheny and Westmoreland counties as more than 20,000 miners restlessly await the presidential approval that will place the industry under the Blue Eagle.

The "Union Beer Garden," operated by Joe Cicconi at Smock, was dynamited early today. Cicconi and his wife and five children were not injured.

State police and Cicconi said the only known motive for the blasting is the fact that Cicconi is a sympathizer of union miners.

sickness victims." These scientists, who do not care to have their names mentioned are willing to risk their lives, as others did when the experiments were made with mosquitoes that practically ended yellow fever as a serious menace.

If the names of the three "unidentified scientists," offering to risk death for the general welfare WERE published they would be forgotten in a week, while the names of Hennan, John L. Sullivan, Jack Johnson, the big Negro, and others, would live on. That is our "civilization."

The code for coal mine owners and workers makes it clear that NRA is to provide powerful support for union labor. Coal mines that have been on a non-union basis for many years, or always, must recognize workmen's unions. The miners will work only five days a week, eight hours a day, which will give them in the seven days a hundred and twenty-eight hours to do as they please. Eight hours a day underground, in the dark away from the sunlight for five days every week, is plenty.

3 Noted Stars Go 'In Trade' to Sell Lingerie, Bonnets

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Hollywood, Sept. 18 — What a thrill the university students in Westwood will get this fall if Mary Pickford sells them hats or if Bebe Daniels and Sallie Eilers sell them handmade handkerchiefs and dainty lingerie. Mary has sponsored the hat shop of her cousin, Mrs. Verna Chalif, which adjoins the ready-to-wear shop of Mrs. Skeets Gallagher.

She has personally chosen the fixtures for the smart shop and helped select every chapeau to be put on sale. Knowing Mary, it's a safe bet that, if Mrs. Chalif needs help in selling her wares, "Anetta's sweetheart" will roll up her sleeves and go to work.

Westwood, a thriving suburb of Los Angeles, welcomed Mary Pickford and Mrs. Chalif today.

The handkerchief-lingerie shop planned by Bebe Daniels and Sallie Eilers will make its formal bow with a tea and reception next month. Mrs. Phyllis Daniels will be in active charge, with Bebe and Sallie as assistants when business is pushing.

The "Westwood Ho" movement, pardon my liberty with the classic phrase, was started by Pauline (Mrs. Skeets) Gallagher when she opened her ready-to-wear shop a year ago. The university girls flocked to Pauline's shop, also many movie stars, and in an incredibly short time the Gallagher shop was a paying institution. Pauline's success has encouraged other movie folk to go into business in Westwood. Mrs. Frank Borzage, wife of the well known director, successfully managed two dress shops in Honolulu and now will try her luck with a beauty shop.

Today it's unfashionable to be idle and in the film colony it just isn't done.

Gen. O'Duffy Defies De Valera Regime

Thurles, Irish Free State, Sept. 18.—Former President William T. Cosgrave and other leaders of the new United Ireland party at a meeting opening the campaign of the Blue Shirts concurred in Gen. Duffy's statement that if President Eamon De Valera attempted by reversion of the law or by a trick to get rid of the movement because it endangered his party politically, the government would come to a speedy end.

Monk Mascot Brings Only Bad Luck to This Sailor

William R. Milligan, purser of the freighter Zaremba, which arrived at East Boston yesterday from Africa, has decided today that his lucky charm—a dog-faced monkey—has brought him the wrong kind of luck.

Milligan bought the monkey in Bumitu to bring himself some good luck, but when he got into a stud poker game on board the ship he found himself an easy second in every hand. So now he has decided that when the Zaremba reaches New York his luck charm, which answers to the name of "Boobo," will be sold.

In spite of his failure to bring his owner good luck, "Boobo" proved to be the feature entertainment on the journey here. On the way along the African coast he escaped from his cage and took refuge outside the deck railing, holding onto the protruding deckplates with his hind legs.

Two sailors tried to get him back and almost fell overboard. It was finally decided to let him stay there and food was lowered to him. After a time he returned of his own volition.

During the rest of the journey he made himself the central figure in whatever was going on aboard the ship. He developed the habit of grabbing cigarettes from sailors, extinguishing the light and eating the tobacco. He also developed a taste for coffee with plenty of sugar.

BUY NOW DRIVE WILL ENTER EVERY HOME

Directly in line with the "Buy in September" and "Buy American" campaign, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, plans are being perfected to enlist every home in the state in the official NRA "Buy Now" drive, which opens Wednesday, it was announced today.

The consumers' committee of the Massachusetts State Recovery Board is to send a letter to every home asking the entire support of the household for the buying campaign.

The letter, prepared by Dean Everett W. Lord of the Boston University School of Business Administration, chairman of the committee, will request consumers to purchase articles now and favor Blue Eagle concerns in their buying.

In the meantime a survey among a group of representative retail merchants in Boston reveals a definite upward trend in business with August buying showing an increase of 22 per cent over the same month last year.

Merchants declare that the NRA and the "Buying Campaign" sponsored by Hearst newspapers has been most helpful in stabilizing confidence and bringing to the public the thought that higher prices were imminent.

Representatives of the rug, furniture and drapery trade said they had had a considerable increase in trade in both July and August. This was not limited to the Boston area but extended all over Eastern New England, it was said.

Fur merchants report a material improvement in that line, dating from last May. The August sales were at least double those of August, 1932, and in many stores were better than August sales in the last several years.

Dealers in china and glassware report they are selling more on the basis of quality and that people are apparently more willing to spend money.

Men interested in getting goods at the cheapest possible price but now they want quality and will pay a little more for it.

The jewelry business showed a general increase in August. The retail shoe business started to pick up in May and has shown monthly increases. August is usually the worst month in this line, but merchants claim business increased 18 to 22 per cent over that of August, 1932.

7,000 STRIKE IN BROCKTON SHOE SHOPS

Brockton, Sept. The shoe industry here was at a standstill today with 7000 workers on strike following their refusal to return to work pending final settlement of a dispute with the owners of 75 factories here.

The decision to strike was reached at an overflow mass meeting here attended by the bulk of the striking workers. By a unanimous vote the control board of the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen decided to hold out for their original demands.

It had been thought that the three weeks' strike had been ironed out after the National Labor Board in Washington proposed that the workers return to their benches while the matter was arbitrated.

The trouble had its inception three weeks ago when a group of workers were discharged after refusing to pay dues to the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. Others followed and a great number walked out in sympathy.

JOHNSON READY TO SET RETAIL TRADE CODE

Washington, Sept. 18 (INS)—Master codes for retailers and the construction industry, involving upwards of 10,000,000 employes, today became the goal of Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, as the bituminous coal code went to the White House.

Although the retail and construction codes have been eclipsed by the bitter fight over coal, recovery officials hold them of even more importance because they extend into every nook and corner of the nation.

Although Johnson has approved price control features in both the coal and oil codes, he refuses to label them price-fixing. He has indicated he would approve a provision in a retail code forbidding selling below wholesale cost, plus 10 per cent.

President's Approval of Coal Code Awaited

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt's formal approval of soft coal's fair competition code topped today's NRA program as Hugh S. Johnson turned his energies toward retail price control plans.

Johnson expected to present the long-disputed bituminous coal charter to the President during the day. Promulgation today would make the code effective Oct. 2.

Before Johnson and his counsel, Donald Richberg, were a host of legal arguments on the proposed retail trade code provision for maintaining minimum retail prices at 10 per cent above wholesale costs.

Involved with prices too was the need of getting the many retail stores now unorganized into trade associations or similar agencies for code administration. Johnson sought a "crackerjack trade association man" to do this job.

"I LEARNED MIRIAM HOPKINS' BEAUTY SECRET"—I DISCOVERED

this soap contains precious elements skin itself has...and must have to stay YOUTHFUL!

SCIENTISTS EXPLAIN

1 "A few years ago," says Miss Minerva Fedyn, of New York. "I was so unhappy. I realized I wasn't very attractive to the boys in our set and naturally that made me miserable."

2 "One night when I was at the movies I noticed how exquisitely lovely Miriam Hopkins' skin looked in the close-ups— how its beauty stirred you. What wouldn't I give to have a skin as lovely as that!"

3 "Next night I was thrilled to read in the newspapers how Miriam Hopkins cares for her lovely skin—and some wonderful things scientists say about this beauty care . . ."

4 "I began at once to use Lux Toilet Soap faithfully. I really expected results—and I really got them! In a very short time my skin grew as much lovelier I was overjoyed."

"NO MORE HEART-ACHES NOW!"

5 "Nice skin does make a difference! Nowadays I'm far and away the happiest girl in our crowd. My skin is soft, smooth, and clear—really lovely! I don't know what it is to spend a lonely evening—or to go without the compliments that every girl wants to have. I certainly wish I'd realized sooner how very attractive lovely skin is—and what to do to have it!"

For every type of skin—dry, oily, "in-between," 9 out of 10 screen stars, including Miriam Hopkins, Paramount Star, use fragrant, white Lux Toilet Soap. Why don't you try this simple beauty care?

"This Soap the Screen Stars use is a Wonderful Aid to Complexion Beauty" SCIENTISTS DECLARE

Here's the Reason... Skin grows old-looking through the gradual loss of certain elements Nature puts in skin to keep it youthful. Gentle Lux Toilet Soap, so readily soluble, actually contains such precious elements—checks their loss from the skin.

LEADERS PRAISE HEARST RADIO ADDRESS

Washington, Sept. 18—Enthusiastically commending the radio address of William Randolph Hearst on "Inflation, Deflation and Reflation," congressional leaders declared it would prove a powerful aid in bringing about the policy a vast majority in both Houses of Congress is demanding to end the depression.

Every senator and representative, in commenting upon the address, remarked the clarity and force with which Mr. Hearst presented the complex currency question. Such a statement reaching a vast audience even the air, they believe, will do much toward clearing up doubts in the public mind and hasten the inauguration of an inflation policy.

THOMAS GLAD OF AID

Stating that he "naturally approved" of Mr. Hearst's speech, Senator Thomas (D.) of Oklahoma, Senate leader in the fight for inflation, said:

"Mr. Hearst thoroughly understands the money question and the importance of money and credit inflation to bring about recovery and permanent prosperity. I am glad we have his support in our fight to end the money famine. We will have no expansion of credit until we have an expansion of the currency. Mr. Hearst has stated the case splendidly."

Senator King, Dem., of Utah, expressed himself as especially pleased with Mr. Hearst's comments on the opposition of reactionary bankers to an inflation policy. He said:

"Mr. Hearst's attack on the bankers was sound, and his warning to them was warranted. They must be made to realize there must be some change in our currency policy."

GOES BEYOND HEARST

In hearty agreement with Mr. Hearst's third proposal of expanding the currency by the government buying silver and issuing silver certificates and subsidiary coinage, King said he was prepared to go further than that—to establish by law a fixed ratio between silver and gold at 16 to 1 or 20 to 1. He added:

"I favor increasing the amount of money in circulation, but I have not yet come to favor the issuing of greenbacks. We can have a sound expansion of the currency without any wild scheme that would retard investments and retard business recovery."

Senator Fletcher (D.) of Florida, chairman of the Senate banking and currency committee, expressed the belief that the policies advocated by Mr. Hearst will "substantially prevail." Fletcher said:

"I listened to every word of Mr. Hearst's speech as it came over the radio. It was splendid, logical and forceful. His definition of inflation, deflation and reflation was clear, understandable and enlightening. His reasoning and views should impress the country. They give us a way out of the depression. I believe, in the main, that substantially the policies he advocated will prevail."

EXPANSION 'CRYING NEED'

Senator Van Nys (D.), of Indiana, said:

"Mr. Hearst presented the crying need for the expansion of our governmental currency in his usual succinct and convincing manner.

"I am in receipt of scores of letters daily from business men, industrialists and farmers, showing the absolute necessity for the expansion of our currency and credit before we can hope for permanent rehabilitation of the nation.

"By the exercise of any one or all of the methods pointed out by Mr. Hearst, rational and controlled inflation of the currency can be effected with resultant credit expansion and business and agricultural prosperity.

"I am very glad to note of assistance toward bringing about these results."

BRITTEN—"INFLATE NOW"

Rep. Britten, (R.), of Illinois, said:

"Mr. Hearst's suggestions for issuing government bonds to Federal Reserve banks as backing for banknotes and for a direct issue of government notes are very logical methods of inflating the dollar and might well be begun at once."

Rep. Jones, (D.), of Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, said:

"Mr. Hearst made a very fine statement. It was clear, logical and convincing. It will simplify the question in the public mind and aid the cause."

RADIO SEARCH FOR CAHILL

car at Silver Lake in Wilmington som time after 6 a. m. a week ago today.

This man is described as 28 to 30 years old, weighing about 140 pounds, 5 feet 5 inches tall, with blond hair, mixed with gray, and wearing overalls.

The two men were seen by a newsboy to leave the car and walk into the woods in the direction of the Silver Lake railroad depot.

FOUR TIMES ON AIR

Police have established that a man resembling either the 6:46 a. m. or the 7:19 train for Boston (both Daylight times) on that morning, and possible paid a cash fare. Both trains are locals, making a number of stops.

The first of Dist.-Atty. Bishop's four broadcasts asking that all hearers aid in the search for Cahill, went through WNAC—and a chain program was interrupted out of New York to relay the appeal even farther west and south.

At 3 p. m., through the Boston Evening American, over Station WAAB, the prosecutor appealed again in the hunt for the eye-witness, missing from Somerville, and Bishop will broadcast a third time through Station WBZ at 6 p. m., and a fourth time through Station WEEI at 6:30 p. m.

The prosecutor's appeal included a minute description of the missing man, declared by Police Chief Thomas Damery of Somerville to be "wanted for murder" of the 10-year-old Somerville girl, and included a synopsis of the brutal slaying.

BISHOP'S APPEAL

"I am Warren L. Bishop, district attorney of Middlesex county, Cambridge, Mass., the district attorney broadcast. "My appeal today is to the people of these United States, an appeal to find the murderer of Margaret McCarthy. I can conceive of no better agency than through the radio.

"Here in our midst a little child, 10 years old, was brutally murdered a week ago, little Margaret McCarthy of Somerville, Mass. I want the man responsible for that murder. Circularizing the police of America is one thing, and that I am doing today.

"I now seek to enter every home and touch every fireside. Thanks to this station, I am given that opportunity now. Every clue we have followed emphasizes the necessity of questioning Harry P. Cahill in connection with the slaying of that child.

"Harry P. Cahill must be found. He is somewhere, and some man, woman or child knows or may hear where he is. Public justice demands that the murderer of Margaret McCarthy be found. Will you call me now at my office at my expense and reveal the whereabouts of Harry P. Cahill?

DESCRIBES CAHILL

"Now let me give you his description. Harry P. Cahill, aged 45, weight 165, height five feet ten inches, complexion medium, hair dark brown, eyes blue. The clothing he wore when last seen was a blue serge suit, black tie, dark felt hat, black shoes and stockings and nile green shirt.

"Identifying marks: Scar on left eyelid when closed, one tooth missing in upper left side, sunken cheeks and veins in nose. He wore a silver wrist watch with leather strap.

"Again in conclusion I ask you to help me. I know every good citizen knowing of this terrible crime will join with me today in this nation-wide manhunt. This is my appeal as district attorney of Middlesex County. I know you will not fail me."

CHECK PHONE CALL

Meanwhile today, police and detectives were checking on a telephone call received by Cahill shortly before his disappearance from a man whose name he would not reveal to his sister, Mrs. Charles H. Houghton.

Mrs. Houghton, who told police today about the call, said her brother did admit, however, that he had an appointment with the man.

Police are now convinced that there was a man with Cahill when he abandoned his car on the shore of Silver Lake in Wilmington, dropped an old coat on the ground, not far from the car, and walked with the man into the woods.

Both the leaving of the car, automobile locked, and the abandoning of the coat, in which were two old snapshots to which Chief Damery attaches no importance, are regarded as "blinds" by the investigators.

Regarded as equally valueless was a pocketbook found in Cahill's effects, which eventually was discovered to be a picture of the previously declared "mystery girl" in Cahill's life.

The "mystery girl," however, was only a cousin, Miss Eva Welch, of Andover, and when interviewed by State detectives she said she was unable to give any information as to Cahill's whereabouts.

Chief Damery was a target today according to report, for many thrusts from the family of Cahill, his elderly father, a brother, both of Lawrence, and three Somerville sisters.

The missing man must be dead were said to have objected strenuously to the hunt for him. Cahill's brother, James, openly declared that a police gun was pressed to his side during the six-hour grill Saturday morning at his home in Essex st., Lawrence.

Chief Damery, however, denied today that there was any breach between him and the Cahill family and said James Cahill, a brother of the missing man, had telephoned this morning to assure that stories of a breach were false.

"I want the police to know," said Cahill, according to Damery, "that the family feels they have been treated very fairly and decently. I called you so that no could get that right. Any story to the effect that we were not treated that way is absolutely false.

"There is also mention in a morning paper of a police officer pressing a gun into my side and making me go down into the cellar of my home. That never happened and I regret that such a story should be broadcast."

AIRMEN MUST WATCH EYES

Maj.-Gen. Robert U. Patterson, U. S. army surgeon general, told 200 American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology members, at their Hotel Statler conference today, that four laymen realize the important part ophthalmology (science of the eyes) plays in the every-day life of army and civilian airplane pilots.

Gen. Patterson remarked that in the vast majority of plane crashes the fault lies with the pilot rather than with the plane itself.

Severe eye strains occur to pilots by changing scene of vision from a plane, travelling a high rate of speed over unfamiliar ground, and then quickly looking at navigation maps.

To keep a direct check on the condition of fliers eyes is even more important than the check of their physical capabilities, he said.

Dr. John M. Wheeler, of New York, made famous for his successful operation on the eye of the King of Siam, also addressed the gathering.

Closed Western Bank to Pay Depositors

By agreement with the Springfield National Bank, the date for release of deposits of some 12,000 depositors of the closed Western Massachusetts Bank and Trust Co. has been fixed for Thursday, Sept. 28, Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy announced.

Major requirements of the plan for the release of the deposits have been fulfilled and by the end of this week it is expected other details will have been adjusted.

CUBAN OUTLOOK GRAVE; U. S. IS WARNED

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—State Department officials today awaited a full report upon a conversation at Havana between Ambassador Welles and Provisional President Grau San Martin at which it was assumed here the possible course of the United States in Cuba had been discussed.

Secretary Hull told newspapermen no word could be said about the question of recognizing the Cuban government until detailed information had been received upon the conversations.

He had received only a meagre report. Further word was desired, also, he added, upon the series of meetings between Grau San Martin and leaders of other political factions.

The condition in Cuba was painted by consular reports received here today as grave.

Complaints were received from the managers of five sugar mills around Camaguey who had become alarmed by continued labor agitation. A threatening mob was reported also at Soledad.

At Manzanillo, where a mob recently threatened an American-owned ice plant, reports told of the calling of a general strike for today. The State Department was informed the mayor there had been deposed with an army sergeant assuming his place.

Upon results of conferences between the leaders of political factions in Havana, and upon conferences with Ambassador Welles, officials here believe may hinge the course of future events in the island. Should the revolutionary government consolidate the backing of other factions and restore peace, recognition probably would follow.

No Phone, Only 2 Elevators as New Postoffice Opens

The new Federal building, 22 stories high, was opened for business today—that is, for some business—but there was no telephone service, and everything was confusion.

Only two elevators were available for general use, the rest being commandeered for moving in furniture.

On the 12th floor, where U. S. Commissioner Jenney inaugurated the first criminal session, the west wind howled chilly while Wong Sing of Salem struggled to prove he was born in San Francisco and should not be deported.

Two civil sessions under Judges Lowell and McLellan were also held in the new structure.

Court clerks opened their new offices but spent most of their time explaining to indignant lawyers that there were no public telephones anywhere in the building and if they could find even a private instrument the clerks would be very much obliged.

The U. S. attorneys were in process of moving in. Part of the postoffice is in the new building but if you want stamps go to old Young's hotel. The weather bureau will move to Thursday.

Insects' Bites Should Not Be Ignored

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FEW THINGS are more annoying that the bite of a mosquito or other insect. The sting usually leads to the sudden appearance on the skin of a form whitish patch surrounded by a reddish area. Often insect bites lead to great discomfort and pain.

Dr. Copeland

As a rule the common mosquito bite produces temporary annoyance. But the bite of an insect like the "redbug" or jigger may prove to be more serious.

These pests are small, difficult to distinguish and are usually encountered in the grass and weeds of pastures and meadows.

If you have ever suffered from such a bite you will agree with me when I say it is a painful and distressing affliction. Red blotches appear upon the skin and these may assume the size of a silver half-dollar. Nausea and fever may complicate the picture. A bruise forms at the point of the bite and when the ruptures there is always the danger of secondary infection.

Never neglect a jigger bite. A warm bath is beneficial. After bathing apply baking soda to the bite by dabbing it on like talcum powder. At times a weak solution of ammonia lessens the pain and discomfort.

When the blisters break avoid contact with soiled linen or clothes. Keep a sterile gauze bandage on the open blister until it has healed. A mild soothing antiseptic ointment can be applied.

Another painful insect bite is that of the black spider. This insect is frequently seen around barns and such. Wherever possible my advice is to avoid this insect.

The bite produces stinging and sharp pain. The local symptoms subside but within a short time the victim complains of spasming pain throughout the body. Cold sweats, difficulty in breathing, nausea and vomiting are other signs of the disturbance. In severe cases delirium and convulsions of a violent and alarming nature may occur.

Insect bites are common during the summer and fall months. Immediate medical attention is advisable since the outcome of the bite may be grave. Never neglect a bite of some unknown insect, no matter how trivial it appears to you.

New Coats for Fall Trips

Going away on a cruise? To the World's Fair? Motoring? You'll need a new topcoat to slip on when a chilly breeze springs up en route . . . and for general fall wear later. You have two major choices concerning your coat this season. Consider first the good old reliable coat classic. It's a comfortable and practical topcoat—good for most daytime purposes because it's sturdy and warm.

Only, this year it looks as if it were born for football games, motoring and flying. It's an easy swagger, on very full or smartly striped. Some are topped by huge fur collars. For then, fancy wool fabrics are conspicuous. Diagonal stripes, fancy tweeds, flecked woolens, fancy checks of all sizes, polo cloths and good old classic tweeds are a few of the fabric novelties you need to go far to beat for sportswear.

Consider next the dressmaker type of sports coat. It's more lavishly furred. It means, briefly, a more feminine type. Where the other was born to the country, this type smacks of the city. It has an inconspicuous hemline. This kind of coat is not generally flared. It follows the usual formal daytime coat silhouette, only the fabrics and furs differ. It's the fur that monopolizes all the attention. Nine times out of ten, it has a very large fur collar. Fur, as a matter of fact, has never been used so lavishly for sports wear.

It is being used more and more in fine coats and suit coats. One very good designer offers the most unusual complement to her sport coats. She shows a polo cloth lined and trimmed with flat nutria. With the coat comes a vest of matching fur, good on those days you swing down the street with your coat flying open, your hands pushed into huge pockets.

You might track down the coat sketched on the left, in natural polo cloth trimmed in beaver, to wear with a very dark beaver woolen dress, if not crave a very smart town costume. Knot the brightest orange kerchief you can find about your neck. Or, to dramatize the outfit more, try an impudent red-and-green dotted scarf and hat set with it. We've seen the combination worked out—it is very chic when the colors are put together carefully.

The other coat, on the right which we call the classic type, in the first paragraph, offers limitless possibilities. If you're dying for the utterly last word, pick out the predominating color in the check, match it to a few yards of plain woolen, and take the material to your favorite batmaker. He'll cut a little fatigue cap out of it and the remainder will go to make a very straight skirt to show beneath the hem of the coat. This particular model is collared in raccoon, but others come with astrakhan, long-haired lynx, beaver and squirrel.

Two types of coats for a cruise or for motoring are shown above and described in the accompanying article.

"Rigoletto" Is First Opera Next Week

By LEIGH HARBRIDGE

Grand opera comes into town next week. On Monday the Alfredo Salmaggi company sets up shop at the Boston Opera House, and that evening the season begins. It should be a gala event; for Boston does love its stately opera, and this company will probably meet all the demands.

It will be grand opera at popular prices, for the top seat will be $1, and thence downward the cost of seats is scaled in as low as 25 cents. Which, I think, is an all time record; I do not remember any lower price for admission to hear Verdi and the rest.

For the opening "Rigoletto" has been chosen. At first I was thought "Aida" might be a better choice; but due consideration of those who know their public swings the honor to "Rigoletto."

The repertory for the first week is announced as follows:

Monday, "Rigoletto," Dorothy Chapman, soprano; Marie Powers, mezzo soprano; Claudio Frigerio, baritone; Ralph Errolles, tenor; Nino Ruisi, bass; Alberto Baccolini, conductor. Tuesday (26th), "Lohengrin," Charlotte Ryan, Dreda Aves, Ettore Nava, Franco Tafuro, Nino Ruisi, Baccolini, conductor. Wednesday matinee (27th), "Hansel and Gretel," Ethel Fox, Alice Isaesler, Beatrice Altieri, Luigi Dalle Molle, Baccolini, conductor. Wednesday night, "Cavelleria Rusticana," Giuseppina Paterno, Dorothy Bacon, Luigi Dalle Molle, Franco Tafuro, and "Pagliacci," Santa Biondo, Ettore Nava, Edward Ransome, Baccolini, conductor. Thursday night (28th), "Traviata," Lola Monti Graney, Alice Haesler, Claudio Frigerio, Alleaandro Ziliani, Bambosheck, conductor. Friday night (29th), "Faust," Lucy Monroe, Marie Powers, Pietro Saparani, Franco Tafuro, Nino Ruisi, Bambosheck, conductor. Saturday matinee (30th), "Madame Butterfly," Lola Monti Goraey, Marie Powers, Pietro Saparni, Franco Tafuro, Nini Ruisi, Bambosheck, conductor. Saturday night (30th), "Trovatore," Anna Leskaya, Dreda Aves, Ettore Nava, Edward Ransome, Nino Ruisi, Bambosheck, conductor.

Rialto Allures With Drama and Operetta

Kathleen Karr, extremely talented actress in the galaxy of stars surrounding Joe Cook in "Hold Your Horses," held over at Shubert.

Desiree Tabor, shining among the luminaries in the de luxe operetta, "Music in the Air," which has its local premiere at the Colonial.

Dix Stars on Bowdoin Bill

The Bowdoin feature pictures and six acts of vaudeville, "No Marriage Ties," with Richard Dix, Doris Kenyon, Alan Dinehart and Elizabeth Allen and "Be Mine Tonight," are the films. The vaudeville has Merle's Educated Cockatoos, Leach La Quinian Trio, gymnasts; Glenn Pope and Company, comedy magic; Mason and Mason, comedians; the Silvertetes, dancing artists, and Bud Jackson, singer.

Comedy Film Wins Praise

"Tugboat Annie" continues its amazing career at breaking all records everywhere. Currently it is featured by Manager George Solomon at his Thompson Square Theater in Charlestown, and that veteran showman regards it as a matchless business getter.

"Truly a grand audience picture, and if Hollywood turned out more such," he says, "the public would never more criticize the studios for poor films."

All Intent

Doris Kenyon, acting right up to George Arliss, in "Voltaire," at the Uptown.

"Uncle Tom"

With Otis Skinner as "Uncle Tom" and Queenie Smith as "Topsy," the Players' Club production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was a Broadway's outstanding theatrical thrill last spring, is soon to undertake an extensive tour. Hartford, Conn., Mr. Skinner's home town, will witness the play on Oct. 6-7, following which it will be presented for one week at Holyoke.

Ann Codee the Scollay Star

Ann Codee, from gay Paree, is the star on the new vaudeville bill opening at the Scollay today. Her act features song and comedy, of the type for which the lass is famous.

Other acts include Buddy Walker, billing himself as the nuttiest of nuts, known for his antics in the Village Grove Night Club show; Maidie and Ray, comedy with the ropes; Charlie Jordan and George Stone, radio jesters; dancing of all types, including adagio, in a six-person revue, Osaka boys, Oriental perch act, and Cedora, motorcycle "marvel."

Fair Queen

Mam'selle Verne, burlesque "queen," in "Girls from Follies" company, opening Old Howard season today.

Fibe-a-Day

"Vanities" at the RKO Boston is setting up a new high mark of attendance. Result of big business over the weekend is that beginning today Bert Hanson, manager, adds one more show to the schedule, making five a day; on stage as follows: a. m., 9.30, 11.42; p. m., 2.15, 4.43, 7.11, and 9.30. The last is a full show, the stage bill being followed by the feature film, at 10.35 p. m.

BOOKS—And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In a recent number of Harper's Bazaar there was an article by an anonymous debutante which gave us some interesting information. She bravely stated that she came out in what will probably go down in history as "the era of bad taste," when fortunes were spent on parties and clothes, when an evening, in fact, was not a success unless one went to at least four dances, each complete with four forty-piece orchestras—one at the Ritz, one at Sherry's, one at the Park Lane and one at Pierre's.

As an old fogy, I have occasionally been invited to just such coming-out parties, to sit on the sidelines and watch the girls parade. In most cases it has been a disheartening spectacle, especially as one sat dreamily considering the simplicity of an elder day.

In our youth debutantes came out in a quiet way, in their own homes. To have engaged a hotel ballroom would have been unthinkable. Children were even born, if you can believe it, in their own homes, not in hospitals, and somehow they survived as well as those of the present generation. Far back, Theodore Roosevelt first saw the light in an old house on East Twentieth street, New York, not in a hospital room in a huge building which, according to all precedent, would by this time have been torn down. So we should have had no place in which to establish a tablet. In a few years there will be no shrines at all in our country. We shall have to imagine where great men and women were born, and two decades from now grown women can no longer point to the hotel where they first "came out." For the hotel will have been destroyed, no doubt, or remodeled as a loft building. For "change, change unceasing" is the city's cry, and yesterday's beauty is tomorrow's horror.

There may, as a matter of fact, be no residential section left in Manhattan, for more and more people are drifting to the country, and New York may in time be merely a commercial metropolis, with people going there to transact whatever business they have, and returning as soon as possible to the serenity of the city's environs.

In former days debutantes made their bow to society in the same fifty rooms where two or three generations before them had done the same thing. The great central chandelier shed its light down upon them as it had upon their great-grandmothers, and from a select list of invitations were sent out.

There was no such thing as "gate crashing," and youthful guests of the male persuasion in their cups were not allowed within the sacred precincts. In fact, youthful guests in their cups were not tolerated at all. A young man known to be a heavy drinker found himself deliberately neglected, and he was forced to disappear from so-called society as if he had never existed. There were certain traditions which were upheld, and woe betide those who flouted them.

Dignity has gone out, and ribald, care-free manners have taken its place. Someone was telling a story the other day of a certain lady of wealth who became an expatriate years ago, and brought up her children in France. But when her oldest daughter had reached the age when she should be "brought out," the mother had a feeling that this important gesture should be made back in dear old America. She had lost all contact with her former friends, and when she arrived in New York, with no home to go to, she engaged a ballroom, months in advance, at one of the smarter hotels. Then she had to borrow a social list from an ancient acquaintance, and on the great evening she found herself surrounded by a group of young people, not one of whom she knew even by sight!

The acquaintance from whom she had borrowed the list did not, naturally have her own name upon it; and so the only face familiar to the hostess was not seen on this sadly empty occasion. An ennui was incurred—one of those minor social enmities which develop into cold hatred, and something which should have been a roaring comedy turned into a wretched tragedy.

What is being introduced to society in New York, and then to sail back to France the next day, forgetting all about them, strikes my thinking person as the height of folly. What is gained except the distribution of some money to a hundred hired waiters and an orchestra of 40 men? And, of course, a royal check placed in the hands of the manager of the hotel.

We will get back to sanity some time, but the hour seems still far away. It will come only when there is no such thing as "society," and yet, isn't that true at this very moment?

PAVLOWA'S LIFE FOR SCREEN | Comedy Conference Topic | STAGE GOES DOUBLE ON LURE

Former Manager of Dancer Is in Europe to Engage Ballet; Hunt Player for Role

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Sept. 18—Great interest is aroused over Jesse L. Lasky's ambitious plans to film "Flight of the Swan," based on the colorful life of Anna Pavlowa, famous dancer. Sol Hurok, for many years Pavlowa's manager and the one who brought her to America, is now in Europe arranging for a Russian ballet for the picture.

J. L., who has had enough compliments on "The Power and the Glory," and "Parkley Square," to turn the head of a less well balanced person, has purchased the screen rights of "Flight of the Swan," by Andrew Oliveroff, life-long friend of Pavlowa.

Louella O. Parsons

Bessie Lasky (Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky in private life) and Philip Dunne have written the treatment and will make the adaptation. Meanwhile a search will be instituted for the right person to play the Pavlowa role.

Who knows, Gen. Smedley Butler may accept Jack Warner's invitation to play himself in "Shoot to Kill." Many important world figures are Hollywood-minded these days. Jack, who stopped talking about his plans long enough to rib Mervyn Leroy on his engagement to Lois Warner, outlined "Shoot to Kill" a story of the United States marine corps, based on the experiences of Gen. Butler and starring the red-headed James Cagney. Will Mervyn, youthful director, get a welcome home from the Warner crowd?

JOINS M-G-M SHOW

Pretty certain when Frances Williams, the girl who introduced the Charleston in New York and who has a long string of musical comedy successes to her credit, came to Hollywood it was on movie business. Today the rumored contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer became a fact. She will be featured in some of M. G. M.'s musical comedy plans. Miss Williams' most recent appearance was in "The New Yorker" and The Scandals."

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD

Warner Brothers' inability to allow Jeanne William to remain on the Goldwyn lot after September 30 will cost Sam Goldwyn another useful fortune. The exterior scenes salvaged in the Anna Sten original picture were the ones in which William appeared with the German actress. Impossible to finish with William by September 30 because of the necessity for rewriting part of the story, Sam had another reason for worry over his Sten picture. It is to be hoped Jack Warner can see his way clear to spare William for another two weeks. Perhaps William can divide his time between the two studios.

A LINE OR TWO

Isabel Jewett, pretty blonde and the woman in Lee Tracy's life, has been signed on a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the company that pays Lee his weekly salary. Talked with Maurine Hanline, W. K. author, and he has just sold M-G-M a story, "No Nice Girl Swears" (grand title) for Jean Harlow. Don Alvarado is on his way via air to New York. He sails on the Rex for Rome to play the lead in a British international picture to be produced by Monte Banks. Plenty of talk around about George Stevens, youthful director, a comer they say, he directed the "Conens and Kelly in Trouble" and now he is on the M-G-M lot directing the comedy scenes in "Hollywood Party." Clark Gable was welcomed on the M-G-M lot by everyone today. He has gained ten pounds and looks great since his recent operation. Paramount really pulled a surprise in their selection of Charlotte Henry for the part of Alice in "Alice in Wonderland." In all the names mentioned not an inkling was given that she would win the coveted role.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD

JACK OAKIE'S ma, MRS. EVELYN OFFIELD, is off for the east to make a personal appearance. JACK says she is so thrilled she is trying him. Hollywood's maestro of fun-making in films is Hal Roach, producer of merry short features, and occasionally a full length mirthquake. Thelma Todd is from our New England, and Patsy Kelly has signed a Roach contract.

New Program at Uptown

On the same program is shown "The King of Jazz" with Paul Whiteman and his orchestra.

Globe Trotter

First pictures of the latest turmoil in Cuba are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum. Exciting scenes show the populace cheering the newest president, Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin as he appears on the palace surrounded by the junta which elected him. Then Dr. Grau San Martin congratulates Fulgencio Batista on his promotion to colonel and chief of staff who, as a mere sergeant, led the military uprising that caused the downfall of de Cespedes.

In a stirring address, President Roosevelt speaks from the White House grounds to the National Citizens' Committee sponsoring the 1933 mobilization for human needs. The Army and Navy football squads are shown in their first practice.

Opens Tomorrow

The opening of the new Sierra comedy, "Spring in Autumn," starring Blanche Yurka, has been postponed by Arthur J. Beckhard and Irving A. Isaacs until tomorrow evening at the Tremont. Those holding tickets for tonight can have them exchanged or presenting them at the Tremont box office. There will be an extra matinee Thursday in addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees this week.

"Ladies Must Love" Musical Film, RKO Keith Feature

By HARRIS MORGAN

Tunefully gay goes the RKO B. F. Keith screen, the highlight picture being a melange of mirth and melody called "Ladies Must Love." For frothy entertainment it is the recipe to engender jollity within, and one may commend for hilarity its scrumptious battle royal of three of its lady stars.

June Knight and Neil Hamilton are the more important figures in the romantic theme, but the big scene is stolen by the gorgeous scrap of Dorothy Burgess, Sally O'Neil and Mary Carlisle. They're up in a penthouse apartment and argument leads to scuffling. Vases, pictures, books, lamp shades and all other movable furnishings serve as missiles in the ensuing conflict, and the wrecking that greets the eyes of the astonished landlord when he finally bursts in the door is enough to make a manager moan. The ruin is complete. It is the best battle seen in a long time.

The whole trouble comes about over the loss of a man with money, with each girl blaming the other for bringing out the separation from a most promising meal ticket. The disappointed gold diggers immediately break up housekeeping and go their separate ways—but it doesn't last.

The story weaves them together again as friends, and the sweethearts find happiness at the end of the musical trail.

George E. Stone is the best actor in the piece and one also notes Oscar Apfel, Edmund Breese, Maude Eburne and our old friend, Richard Carle.

There is a short feature, "Rhinschnitzche," wherein a little bear is the hero, and he stirs up more real interest than a whole slue of Hollywood stars.

Operetta Reopens Colonial; Mystery Play, the Hollis

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

For the first time in, lo! quite a few moons, there are two legitimate openings on the Boston Rialto. Labor Day broke all records by registering zero on first nights; often it's the past there have been as many as eight, never before was that time-honored date for beginning the fall season, without a new title over a marquee. As if to make up for lost time, tonight sees a double event—"Music in the Air," reopening the Colonial, and "Inspector Charlie Chan," the Hollis.

The Colonial, on the basis of its offering's long run on Broadway, should prove a particularly gala place for the evening. This musical adventure, in two acts, is presented on a lavish scale. As you probably know, the music is by Jerome Kern, and book and lyrics are from the pen of Oscar Hammerstein II, the scenery was by Joseph Urban, one of the great genius' last efforts. The cast fairly sparkles with names, among which you will quickly recognize the merit of Reinald Werrenrath and Al Shean, and of Dunstan Brune, of our home town.

Over on Hollis street the gay lights will blaze forth the glad news that a new mystery play is come in. These thrillers, when deftly constructed, are always good footlight fare, the Hollis drama happens to be the work of Earl Derr Biggers, a master craftsman in his line, whost last novel has been turned into huskin piece by Valentine Davies. Certainly Charlie Chan has given millions entertainment on screen, and this, his first appearance on any boards, can be counted on to mystify and thrill from curtain to curtain.

Soon the show parade will be hitting a merry hot-weather stride; yet there is no fault to be found with a week that will have four theatres open—the Shubert still going big with "Hold Your Horses," and the Tremont tomorrow night lighting up with Blanche Yurka in "Spring in Autumn."

400 Doctors Here for Conclave

Boston should be the healthiest place in the country for the next four days, what with the annual meeting at Hotel Statler of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology.

More than 400 doctors had registered from various parts of the country by the time the business sessions opened today. They were given a warm greeting to the city in an oration by Mayor Curley.

After describing the City Hospital and the various health units of the city, Mayor Curley told the doctors their life's work was just as worthy of decorations as was the work of the decorated generals during the World War.

The convention opened with a public meeting and a reception tendered the doctors by Dr. Burt R. Shurly of Detroit, president of the organization.

'the social whirl' . . . . .

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THE DEBUTANTE SEASON IS AT HAND and a large list of prominent families are included in the roster. One wonders what effect the "New Deal" is going to have in debutante circles. As a matter of fact a New Deal was definitely in order. Somehow we seem to have lost sight of the real point of the debut and have made the event not an advantage but a positive menace to the young lady of today.

"Standing," as Wadsworth so aptly puts it, "with reluctant feet, where the brook and river meet, womanhood and childhood meet." Yes, the one standing wide eyed, eager and interested, but must they so often be subjected to such absolute abandon of all decorum?

There was a time when a man who indulged in too much liquor at a social function become a social outcast; it was an unforgivable offence and nice young ladies were not allowed to associate with him. Then he was tolerated—society's greatest mistake. The next step was to consider him exceedingly smart, to laugh at him and condone him—that had enough in itself. But society of today, or a section of it, has taken the last disastrous step that allows the "lady" to not only tolerate excess drinking but to bring it to parties herself.

Popularity's Price?

I have seen lovely young girls of the finest families in Boston gazing wide-eyed at debutante affairs with an expression in their eyes that makes my heart ache. "Does it really have to be like this, is this what my debutante year means?" Is this the price of my popularity?" And then the answer from mothers, "You must be a social success, so much depends on it."

I can only say that from rather intimate observation far too much is sacrificed to the Great God of Popularity. All a girls natural sweetness and charm are sacrificed if she drinks and smokes to excess—no one can do other than admit that. Then she becomes hard and calculating, disillusioned, and tragic, and the watching world asks, "Is this the cream of Boston's society?" In my estimation the women are more to blame than the men, who after all rather definitely follow the lead and take their cues on department from the girls they are with.

The athletes no longer deem it necessary to keep that splendid training that once was deemed so necessary. And what of the men who accept a girls liquor? Eve may be the temptress, but the modern Adam seems to be pretty weak and soft.

One Solution

ONE MOTHER WHO ENJOYS a very prominent social position has evolved a splendid solution for the problems of the debutante year. She is Mrs. Chester Greenough, wife of Professor Greenough of Harvard, who together guide the social as well as the intellectual life most wisely at Dunster House. Too high commendation cannot be given for the manner in which the house dances are run, with excellent chaperons and quick removal of obnoxious guests.

Mrs. Greenough gave a charming garden party last spring for her daughter, Miss Harriet Atkins, at their Belmont home. Miss Atkins made her formal bow to society and then left with a well chaperoned group of girls for a trip to England from whence she has just returned after a summer of hunting, riding, tennis and golf. This fall she enters Vassar and during vacations will participate in the social functions of her coming out year with the feeling that she is at the same time achieving something beside her own self amusement and self gratification.

She is wearing a sport model this fall of hunters green and a white sport hat. Her sister, Miss Mary Atkins, who has graduated from Vassar last spring, is teaching at the Shady Hill School in Cambridge after a summer of sailing, golfing and outdoor sports on the South Shore. Both girls are granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hornblower of Chestnut st. and Plymouth.

Return of the Luxurious Tea Gown---Introduction of 'Sweater' for Evening

By Charline Davenport

TRAILING SLEEVES and trains of richest velvet, lace and satin—the tea gown in all its splendor has returned to us.

Little velvet coats, inspired by the turtle neck sweater, no less, will be worn by the college set with their evening gowns this winter.

This is news indeed. At the opening today of the beautiful Little Corner Shop at White's, many equally interesting things are displayed. From tailored sports wear to dresses made of Star Dust, evening gowns that sweep the floor from splashy bows at the knees, coats with muffs, a very tangible part of the fur trimming in front, heirs —all kinds of heirs from little ones to Wazzerian ones, plumes, wallpaper ties, sailboat sleeves, sealing wax red and sunlight yellow, black—and black and red, dark rich colors—for evening, no white nor ONE white evening dress—slender lines, flattering, exquisite materials that boast self-trimming—again we have to admit the complete success of the present mode.

Happy Solution

Do we hear any disapproving voices raised over the clothes this season? Could anything be sh[a]pper solution to what "we should really be"—than the slim silhouette by day, the grace of softly trailing silks and velvets—at night?

Even the surprise evening gowns are refreshing. You know the ones that have the high, modest neck in front with extrem[e] decolleage in back—oh, to be in this fashion parade with all enthusiasm one can so easily have when clothes DO things for you.

There is nothing more discouraging than shopping for hours and days, pulling off dresses, putting on others, having the hair straggle, the morale disappear—the feeling that there is everything the matter with you from your neck to your knees if you can't find a dress that makes you look like a prima donna.

This happened a few seasons back but today when the hem of the skirt can be long or short, when the sleeves come to almost any spot that is most becoming, when there are adaptable waistlines, neck lines and shoulders—there will be little excuse for any one of us looking less than a fashion plate.

Schools of Thought

There was an argument once as to whether women dressed in their finest raiment to gain admiration of the opposite sex, to create green-eyed envy in the eyes of other women, or for their own self-respect.

We claim that there are four schools of thought on the subject—some women dress for the pleasure they alone get out of making a beautiful picture—others to see the other woman impressed—some for masculine praise and a full appreciation pad, and others just because it is the thing to do—to always look as well as possible from early morning to the homeward trek after the theater supper party.

And this year, thanks to the gifted ones who establish our mode, no matter what the personal inspiration—we can all be smart and easy to look upon

Very Flattering---Petite Boots and Shoes Selected by Madam Schiaparelli

SHOES THAT GO with the new clothes! Shoes that make the feet look smaller, that flatter them almost beyond recognition. These are the shoes of today.

Remember the time we could order the same kind of footwear year in and year out and not be disturbed about the style element or whether the longer, more gracious width [illegible] of the season?

That time has gone for ever. Now we [illegible] freck—different ones for street wear, an entire shoe wardrobe for sports, and in the evening the feet must be encased in dainty this and that—as the rest of us.

It is flocks more exciting—this having the feet go with the rest of you. So we are showing you here the shoes Schiaparelli selected to wear with her new collection of clothes in Paris at her formal opening.

The black suede semi-toe on the left is one of the best illustrations of what lines can do for the feet. See how little effective stripes of leather that trim the toe and the side? These, little lady, are clever[illegible] put in just that place to make your feet look of such modest proportions that the rest of us wonder how you use it so capably.

The new seven lace boot has the value of dull and bright treatment that is found in most of the smartest ensembles. Just think of being able to repeat this style motif in your shoes and then color up the new scarf, gloves, bag and [illegible] more of the [illegible] progresses.

Most French women take [illegible] and [illegible] virtue about them that nobody can deny. There was a time not so very long ago when many Parisiennes would not consider so slight shoe treatment for [illegible] low heels. Now they are seen up and down the Rue de la Paix in vast numbers in the morning.

The ghillie, we show you in the accompanying illustration, is a new and comfortable variation [illegible] we have taken to our hearts during these many years. The [illegible] is firmly held in place by the tie and the detail of the shoe makes it as smartly sporty as it is comfortable to wear.

These shoes may be purchased in Boston, and are surprisingly reasonably priced that we CAN have shoes to match everything in our wardrobe and have them distinctly new, different and becoming.

Safety Plays Often Used to Lead Declarer 'Out of Danger'

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Safety plays are among the most important plays in Bridge, and the ability to recognize situations requiring them is a mark

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	4♣	Pass
4NT	Pass	5♣	Pass
5♡	Pass	5♠	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

[illegible] South, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding does not call for much comment. North's raise to game is obvious, as is South's slam invitation. It is possible that the bidding would have been better had the cue bids in diamonds and hearts been omitted, but this is not very important.

The Opening lead was naturally [illegible] ing of clubs, which Declarer won in his own hand with [illegible]. He [illegible] and went up with the Ace, and [illegible] perfectly before [illegible] from this point on, as he could not avoid the loss of two trump tricks.

At first he blamed his luck for the debacle, but a minute later he realized that it was his own fault. The proper play was to lead a low spade and finesse the Ten. If this lost, the trumps would be found to fall on the second and third rounds, and this provided for the possibility of four spades in one hand.

As a matter of fact, it would [illegible] been equally good play to [illegible] a low spade from the Dummy and finesse the Nine. A poor [illegible] also make the [illegible] down the Ki[illegible] considering [illegible] nothing [illegible] of course of the first [illegible] that must be played.

The Marry-Go-Round

Brief Study of Standardized Wives

By Helen Rowland

THE IDEAL WIFE is no longer standardized. Individual ideals are as prevalent, now, as individual drinking-cups.

I sometimes wonder, if I were a man, whether I'd rather be married to what is popularly known as a Perfect Wife, who would have a hot dinner waiting for me, promptly at six o'clock every evening, or to one of the more uncertain sort, who might have a surprise waiting for us, every evening.

Some men value creature comforts and punctuality above all things. They LIKE to punch a time-clock at the old front door and to be greeted by the fragrant aroma of a broiling steak or a roasting fowl.

Perhaps that's because their wives have trained them that way. But I have never met any carefree bachelors who enjoyed dining every night at the same place, at the same moment.

Of course it IS comfortable to go into a neat house and to know just where to find your slippers and where to put your hand on the aspirin and to be sure that the buttons will be on your shirts. But does a man really enjoy having a woman fussing around, emptying ash trays, picking up things and looking hurt when he drops his ashes on the carpet? Does he get a lot of comfort out of a house that is kept going like a boiler-factory hall the time, that it will be as neat as a operating-room the oth[illegible]

New Angles on Gloves for Fall

By ANNICE BRINK

WE HOPE you're not hidebound as far as gloves are concerned. Forgive us please, but the pun is purely accidental. And, because it expressed nicely what we mean, it'll have to stand.

* * *

Because you've grown up in the tradition, has devotion to leather as covering for the hands rendered you more or less impervious to the charm of the assorted and unusual material that are on the market now?

Be prepared to slough away all your prejudices in favor of leather and fashion them as well as the quantity of leather gloves always owned by a true lady, it is really necessary for you to have any number of novel gloves to act as stimulants for your ensembles and your spirits.

Woven gloves to match the [illegible]ning of your sports coat and, perhaps, a cap of the same material, is one of the fancies of the moment. Imagine a cruiser blue coat with a scarlet and black striped lining material repeated in gloves and hat. Knockout, what?

* * *

Velvet gloves treated with latex [illegible] make them pliable as the very kin of the hand are worn in the gayest of autumn hues, or the most delicate pastels. Velvet that [illegible] shirred from the wrist to the [illegible] how is a gesture in the direc[illegible]n of the elaborate winter mode.

* * *

Cordovan antelope [illegible] suede[illegible]ca, in colors never before associated with [illegible] our [illegible] of grandma's sacred confidences in knit mittens to keep your fingers warm will take up anything at all.

Remember the pictures of medieval pages with the [illegible] length of leg encased in long hose? Of course, [illegible] still are them on Christmas cards. The new kid gloves for evening that reach the whole length of the arm to the shoulder remind us for all the world of the medieval hose. You will like them. They're undeniably new. Try a tearose kid glove with a French blue gown. You'll thank us.

DO YOU KNOW that the clever shadowing of your eyes will make them seem larger, more luminous and definitely more interesting? Most of the beauty stylists now include a complete color set of especially prepared pastes to use on the upper lid of the eye. These are carefully—and sparingly spread with the fourth finger of the right hand to the lids.

The effect you want—is that delicate coloring of a baby's downlids when he is asleep. There is blue eye-shadow for the blue-eyed, fair-haired girl—delicate lavende[illegible] for brown eyes and green for the others. Or maybap you will want to use blue grey or brown.

Experiment until you find the color or colors that add this delicacy to your eyes that we guarantee that you will never be without eye-shadow again.

Lemon Rinses

Question: Will you kindly tell me if lemon rinses are drying for oily hair?—Miss B. B., Concord, N. H.

Answer. Hair reflects the personal condition of the body and before you can correct the [illegible]ess of the hair you must first search out its cause. Do you eat fatty foods? Are you nervous? Watch your health. Keep your hair immaculate. There is a good dry shampoo on the market that won't spoil your wave. DEAR PANDORA

My dear wife is considerably perturbed about my friendship for a perfectly charming girl I once courted. She recently moved into our neighborhood. This girl was married after we had a silly misunderstanding, eight or nine years ago. Since resuming our friendship she has been lunch and once for supper and a dance at a nightclub.

It was pleasant, even delightful [illegible] renewing [illegible] days.

This is a perfectly natural and normal resumption of an old and innocent acquaintanceship which I have tried, without success to explain at home. Actually, the impatience of my dear wife's attitude in the case is something of a revelation.

I have explained that this old friend[illegible] companionship cannot help but be a refreshing change occasionally and that there is no harm in a ride or a lunch or a dance together, but my dear wife [illegible] sympathetic understanding in this case. Don't you think she would see it differently if we entertained the girl at our home, possibly for dinner or over night, and we had a good heart-to-heart [illegible] talk?

I anxiously await your unutterably smart point of view.

The girl who moved into your neighborhood may have been charming, indeed, but it seems from your story that she had been in the van of all her other rivals. Not like any other cigarette

The United States Government granted Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company the right to use "Chesterfield" for cigarettes

THIS means that the Chesterfield formula—that is, the leaf and the manufacturing formula—is different from that of other cigarettes.

For a cigarette to be milder and to taste better, it has to have in it ripe, mild, mellow tobacco, and the right quantity of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco. Then the cigarette has to be made right.

You can prove for yourself that Chesterfields are not like other cigarettes. They're milder . . . they taste better.

"BUY IN SEPTEMBER AND BUY AMERICAN"

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN New England's Greatest Evening Newspaper MONDAY, SEPTEMBER

"Time to Re-tire"—

FOR MORE REASONS THAN ONE!

This is the ninth illustrated editorial—of a series now appearing in the Hearst Newspapers—on the importance of the Buy Now movement as a contribution to National Recovery.

TIME: A SUNNY SUNDAY AFTERNOON. Place: A road leading to any popular holiday place. People: Two average Americans — out for a good time. BANG! The tire blows—they slow to a halt. Their fun is spoiled. The day is wrecked.

We're not cold-blooded when we say they had it coming to them. We're not being just malicious when we admit we're glad it happened.

Because it is "time to re-tire" for too many car owners —for more reasons than one. Let us explain.

As long as this man (and millions of others like him) kept on trying to get the last lean mile out of his tires—a dealer went without a sale—a factory went without an order—tire builders went without work.

And the man himself rode on rubber that grew more dangerous to him and to others with every added mile.

BUT—now that the tire has blown, the man will buy a new one. A dealer will make a sale—and a profit. A factory will get an order. There will be that much more work for tire builders out in the plant.

And the man himself is a head of the game — because he will have safe, new rubber, good for many thousands of miles, on his wheels.

So we say it is a good thing that this tire blew out. It would be a good thing if all the worn and risky tires in the country blew out together.

For here is the situation: Tire manufacturers and tire dealers, like manufacturers and merchants in all other fields, have joined the President in his Recovery Program.

They have cut working hours. They have fixed wage-scales. They have added new men. They have taken on a bigger overhead to help reduce unemployment.

They are doing their part. But if that part is going to count—the car owner who is riding on old, worn, dangerous tires will have to do his. He'll have to buy new tires now.

And why shouldn't you buy new tires now? Or new shoes, new clothes, new furnishings for the house! If you can afford to buy—what's the sense in trying to make worn out things do? Why not, for your own good, get rid of the old, worn things—and get new things you can enjoy?

That's really all there is to this Buy Now movement! We're not trying to bullyrag you into reckless spending. We're not trying to make it patriotic to be spendthrifty!

We're simply trying to get you to SPEND MONEY NOW FOR THE THINGS YOU NEED.

Spend now, because this is September

September is the logical time to stock up for winter needs—the key-month that indicates whether the season ahead will be a good one or a bad one.

Good business this fall will give Recovery the momentum it needs.

For good business this fall—for the good of the country—for your own selfish interest — start buying now the things you need and can sensibly buy

"OPERATOR 13" :-: By Robert W. Chambers

John Pelham Is Wounded as He Watches Battle at Kelly's Ford

READ THIS FIRST

The Union cavalry generals, Stoneman, Averell and Buford, complained bitterly that they could not surprise their brave and alert enemies, Jeb Stuart and Fitzhugh Lee. Col. Sharpe, head of the Federal secret service, told them it was because of the activities of a girl Confederate spy, Antonia Ford, whose ancestral home was at Culpeper.

Clever, bold and resourceful, Miss Ford was a vital link in Gen. Stuart's chain of spies. So Col. Sharpe sent beautiful Gail Loveless, Operator 13 in the Federal secret service, to Culpeper. Operator 13, an accomplished actress and a daring and successful spy, went to Culpeper and actually became the house guest of Antonia Ford. Her instructions were to checkmate the other girl's efforts and, if opportunity presented, to surrender her to the Union army for punishment—which was quite likely to be death by hanging.

Gail Loveless, for her part, was certain to be hanged if the Confederates discovered her identity. Yet she played croquet with Antonia Ford under the trees of the beautiful estate as coolly and as if no danger impended. Following a cavalry review, a party of Confederate officers came to the house for a midday dinner. One of them was Capt. Jack Gailliard. Gail Loveless, all but swooning with fear when he looked into her eyes, regained her composure when it appeared he had not recognized in this lovely girl the quadroon laundress who once had tricked him and turned out to be a Union spy.

But before the day was out he told her that he had fallen in love with her at sight and begged her to promise that she would be his wife. He swept her into his arms and covered her face with kisses, and she, kissing him, wept because she loved him and because she could not warn him of the dangers that she knew beset him, but must go on doing her duty, and he his, until some day death should end the beauty and the torment of their love. He kissed her goodby and rode away on some secret mission with Antonia Ford.

Because of Operator 13's warnings Antonia Ford was captured, but Gailliard, apparently, escaped. Gen. Averell, acting after a delay of days, on Operator 13's information regarding enemy strength, started his rush across the Potomac with his bluejacket riders.

Maj. Blythe pricked up his veteran ears. "It may mean nothing, general," he remarked. "Who commands them?"

"Averell, it is supposed."

There was a silence. Gail Loveless' dark eyes had been fixed on Stuart and her heart was beating violently.

Stuart said: "Fitz Lee has made all proper preparations. I hope Averell comes to Culpeper." He turned to John Pelham. "Well, then, John, suppose we do remain here over Sunday and see whatever is to be seen. Shall we? Not that I think Averell will really venture to cross the river."

The boy gave him a grateful look.

"I imagine, sir," said Major Blythe to Stuart, "that Fitz Lee can take care of General Averell if he rides this way."

Stuart's blue eyes sparkled. "I am sure of it," he replied; "and I propose to remain here on that chance and see for myself how Fitz Lee is going to do it."

That night after supper there was a great deal of patriotic singing by the young ladies. But Stuart had gone to Fitz Lee's headquarters with John Pelham and only Major Blythe's quavering old voice furnished the bass relief to the fresh-voiced youthful chorus.

Toward 9 o'clock there resounded a trample of cavalry—detachments from the Second Virginia riding down to Kelly's Ford. Everybody retired early. But wax candles burned late in the bedroom of Operator 13, where she sat writing on thin sheets of jeweler's tissue with colorless ink which left no mark.

AGONIZED LISTENING

It was not yet daylight on Sunday morning when Operator 13, fully dressed, pulled a chair to her open bedroom window and listened intently for what she knew was coming.

After a long time a bird awoke and sang a fitful note or two. Star after star faded in the gray chill. Suddenly dawn revealed the foggy woods and fields.

From very far away, softened by fog, came a gunshot. And as though she had been struck by the same bullet, Operator sprang to her feet.

The deadened banging of carbines filled her ears like rolling of muffled drums—lost now in the thunderous racket of horsemen passing the house on a frantic gallop. A clanging alarm of bugles broke out, more horsemen galloping and shouting; lights sparkled in the village.

At the Shackleford house a loud knocking and John Pelham's quiet young voice: "Good-by, Elizabeth! The Yankees have rushed Kelly's Ford and we're off to see the fight!"

The girl, in slippers and cloak, reached the garden gate too late; but Pelham, riding on beside Jeb Stuart, looked back and saw her white arm lifted in farewell. He waved his cap gayly. At that moment the first sunbeam struck Culpeper and Elizabeth Shackleford's eyes, blinding them so that all she could see was her transfigured lover riding straight into the golden flames of morning.

There was a frightful rush of horses, guns and yelling men in blue jackets as Averell's horsemen churned the water of Kelly's Ford into a mass of foam. Down went Fitzhugh Lee's gray jackets; the Second Virginia pickets were sabered or overwhelmed and their supporting company scattered and chased toward Culpeper. The crash of gunfire at the ford rose to a sustained roar.

Operator 13 had run downstairs and out through the trees to the main camp road. Past her thundered Breathed's horse artillery. Then Stuart rode by with Pelham, volunteer spectators of Fitzhugh Lee's developing fight, the Third Virginia thundering on their heels followed by Rosser's command.

For two long hours the blue-jacketed horsemen and gunners had been crossing Kelly's Ford, and now the Third gray jackets struck them a mile inland, followed by the yelling Fifth. Into them galloped two Pennsylvania regiments, tearing a bloody way toward their fighting Rhode Island and Maine comrades. There came a dazzle of flashing sabers and a deafening burst of carbine fire.

John Pelham, reveling in the uproar, turned to call out [illegible] to the Third Virginia, [illegible] seemed to be in some [illegible]. Then a gun in a Yankee battery flashed, and a shell, [illegible] in the mud, tore the boy from his saddle and ripped his [illegible] mate to bloody shreds.

[illegible] the cavalry battled along the road to Kelly's Ford with [illegible] sabers and spitting carbines fired at such close range [illegible] the muzzle flames set the [illegible] jackets afire. Again and [again] the gray jackets galloped [into] the Yankee squadrons [who] savagely fought back, shot [for sh]ot and blow for blow.

RECEDING TIDE

[illegible] dusk their massive formations, now nearly two miles inland on the Culpeper road, began to retrace that road to the fatal river. Up at Blythedale they heard the cannonading become duller and more distant.

Old Maj. Blythe, gray and grim, sat listening to the receding roar of a Yankee raid that had failed. As all other Yankee raids had [illegible] after the awful [illegible] [illegible] A boy [illegible] [illegible] John Pelham [illegible] today.

The boy lay at the Shackleford house. Beside him, her eyes blinded by tears, the girl he had loved was sewing on his shroud . . .

A black servant searching for Miss Loveless, discovered her, weeping on the bench in the box garden.

"Miss Gail, ma'am," quavered the negro maid, "dar's a ole nigger at the back do', say how he gotta get dollah six cents fo' de fish yuh done buy off him dis mawnin', ma'am."

A stab of fright pierced the girl. Then she rose and followed the maid to the kitchen door, where a shadowy figure stood.

"Evenin', ma'am," quavered the old man. "I'se come fo' de fish money, lady."

Operator 13 looked stealthily about her in the lantern-lit darkness.

"What message?" she whispered.

"Young master wif two hosses at de fishin' hole ax yuh kindly hurry quick, kase de rebel provost, on he way to ketch yuh, lady."

The girl gave a last frightened glance around here in the starlight; then, gathering up her poplin skirts in both hands, she sped away among the fruit trees where, in the meadow, the little pond lay glittering and set with trembling stars.

BAGGED GIRL

Astride Gimlet sat a young girl in a pink poplin dress. Ruffled flounces hung in flowery tatters above her knees, revealing a pair of slender legs in brier-torn stockings. On her dangling feet prunella pumps dripped swamp ooze. She had lost her small, round hat trimmed with pink roses, cat briers had scratched the white skin above her stocking tops.

In one thorn-torn hand she still clutched a revolver with chilled and stiffened fingers.

The cavalry sentry at Colonel Sharpe's quarters halted them in the lantern light; the girl straightened up, rubbed her heavy eyes and pulled down the ragged flounces over her naked knees. Chilled to the bone, she was scarcely able to unclose her cramped fingers and push the revolver back into her saddle holster.

She could hear somebody's nasal voice announcing "Two spies reporting from Culpeper Court House sir."

A platoon of cavalry rode up leading five officers' horses. The troops stared solemnly at the two scouts. They took the girl in the pink rags for a rebel spy and were sorry for her.

Presently three Zouave officers of the 55th and 146th New York regiments in red, black and gold, a captain of the 6th Lancers, and a Blue Dragoon major came clanking out of Col. Sharpe's big wall tent and mounted their horses, casting curious glances at the two spies.

Col. Sharpe followed them, a handsome figure in the [illegible] [illegible] the girl on Gimlet, he came [for]ward courteously.

"Are you hurt, ma'am?" he asked in his pleasant voice.

She tried to speak. The [illegible] coolly passed one gold-embroidered arm around her waist, lifted her out of the wet saddle and [set her] on her feet.

But Operator 13 couldn't [illegible] so the tall colonel, summoning John Babcock with a nod, carried her into his warm lamp-lit quarters and placed her in a padded armchair before the glowing stove. An orderly brought her a cup of something aromatic and steaming hot. She held it to her lips with both scarred and trembling hands.

Col Sharpe whispered to Babcock: "Is she wounded?"

"No sir. They shot her hat off when we were swimming Gimlet across the river above. She's just tired and cold."

The spiced eggnog laced with brandy sent a reviving flame through her chilled body. Col Sharpe wrapped her in a traveling [rug]. Babcock [pulle]d off her soaked pumps and [put] her feet to a [buffalo] sack in the glow of the camp stove.

The girl's lips were blue and quivering; tears began to steal down her dirty cheeks.

READY TO HEAR

Col. Sharpe seated himself on a camp chair and motioned Babcock to do the same. To the orderly he said "Look after that horse at once!" To the scout he added quietly "What's your story, Jack?"

"Well, sir," said the scout, "I've remained in touch with Operator 13, as you directed. You've had her reports from Culpeper through me. Then the unexpected happened—as usual. On the night of the eighth Mosby's Rangers slipped through Gen. Stoneham's pickets near Chantilly and nabbed Gen. Stoughton in his bed at Fairfax Courthouse."

Col Sharpe nodded [illegible] He almost smiled.

"Operator 13," continued the scout, "sent me a warning that Miss Antonia Ford had ridden out of Culpeper with a Confederate secret service officer and that something probably was brewing along the river. But Gen. Averell's and Col. Wyndham's pickets noticed nothing, and, as for Mosby, he was in and out of Fairfax and away before Wyndham guessed what had happened.

"Then, sir, it was helter-skelter everywhere, with Wyndham's cavalry riding the river like crazy folk; and Stanton wild with rage. But I kept on after Antonia Ford and Gaston's chief scout, Capt. Gailliard.

"Well, sir, a Federal detective finally located Miss Ford and arrested her, and telegraphed for me. But she already had managed to send a grapevine telegram to Fitzhugh Lee warning him that Averell had started up the river, and that there must be a Yankee spy somewhere in Culpeper."

"How did she guess that?" interrupted Sharpe.

"Pure accident, sir. It's always some accident that finally hangs us. You see, sir, a picket of the Second Virginia Cavalry down at Rappahannock Station stole a basket of fish from an old Negro and started to clean and fry them. They discovered a lady's comb inside a big green bass. One of the teeth of the comb broke off. It was hollow; and in it was a roll of tissue with no writing on it. But these rebel troopers had heard of Yankee tricks. They sent the comb and tissue paper to Gaston's expert chemist, Capt. Gailliard, at Warrenton.

"He'd gone on to Aldie, but Miss Ford was there, and she took the tissue and treated it and read it; and then she sent the grapevine message to Fitz Lee to look for a spy in his own camp. All this Miss Ford triumphantly admitted, and defied us to do anything about it. So we sent her to Washington—but you know, sir, how the President is. And I guess she knows he won't let her be harmed.

"Well, anyway, those gay and clever Johnnies at Rappahannock Station had let the old Negro go, after robbing him of his fish. I found him hobbling along near Culpeper and sent him in to Blythedale to bring Miss Loveless to me. That is how it all happened, sir."

"And you put her on your horse and led her all the way from Culpeper wood into the camp?" asked Col Sharpe quietly.

"Yes, sir, I had to."

Col. Sharpe leaned over and shook the scout's dirty hand. "The honor of the Secret Service Corps is very safe in your keeping, John Babcock," he said.

The eggnog and the warmth of the stove were making Operator 13 drowsy again. Col. Sharpe turned to her and said:

"You were sent out to catch Miss Ford. She's been caught. Gen. Stoneman acted on your further information; and why Gen. Averell didn't go on to Culpeper and destroy Fitz Lee God only knows. You did your part, ma'am; Jack Babcock did his; I have tried to do mine. Our records are clean."

Operator 13, bruised, weary and heartsick, must go again into the maelstrom of lies and betrayals and blood at her country's summons. What terrible task awaits her next?

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN

The Favor of Other Men

Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dizziness, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.

But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all.

Only a free flow of your bile juice will stop this decay poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only fine, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions today. 25¢ at drug stores.

Voice of Broadway

By Louis Sobol

(With Frank Scully)

With Louis Sobol Sleeping in the Sun, a Copy of Fun in Bed for a Pillow, the Old Lazy Bones.)

Once while getting a passport in Munich from Bob Longyear at 7 p. m., of a summer's night, I was asked:

"Where were you born?"

"Steinway," I said

"Well, I've registered some queer ones," he said, "but you're the first guy I ever met who was born in a piano."

When a kid of 10 I saw a man pushing a bike up a hill near Flushing. It had a queer arrangement of gears. I recognized him as Terry McGovern, once the terror of the ring till Young Corbett knocked him gaga.

[illegible] convalescing in a [illegible] mental diseases. We talked and walked about two miles and then said good-bye, as he had to get back to the nut factory, as he expressed it.

I thought it all very sad. He [illegible] alone. But since then the world has caught up to him.

As a schoolboy athlete I suffered an injury, osteomyelitis of the femur, the same trouble that [illegible] But [illegible] and out [illegible] sanatoriums. [illegible] In [illegible]

[illegible] better [illegible] newspaper [illegible] of my life as Variety's [illegible] prima donna abroad married [an]d settled on a policy of producing one best-seller and one kid a year. So far we're two up, and laughing off all hazards on perhaps the toughest golf course this giddy globe has ever laid out.

This proves another pet theory of mine. Unless you can put a man's mind in a splint you don't seriously handicap him by crippling his body.

I tried for my first newspaper assignment in 1912. It was on the old Sun. (It rose in the morning then.) I climbed two flights of stairs and then hid my crutch behind the office door and walked to the sports desk. Harry Cashman was the editor. Chester Lord the managing editor.

P. S. I got the job.

Later I went to the Columbia School of Journalism. Old Edward Mitchell, editor of the Sun was on the advisory board. He [tol]d me I was crazy to quit Park Row for Pulitzer's million dollar word factory on Morningside Heights.

I went anyway and found Howard Dietz, Morrie Ryskind, M. Lincoln Schuster, Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, George E. Sokolsky, Si Seadler and Ike Lo[illegible] as classmates. That was Columbia '17 J. We were the first class in the new building.

Of our time, but not our class, were Joe Greenberg, publisher, Fred van der Water, Leon Frazer, Freddie Schange, Lorenze Hart, Joe Anthony, Morrie Werner, Charles Reed Jones and a mob of others.

Whatever our class we were one united gang and are to this day. We kicked all the campus traditions in the pants, and seniors and freshmen were distinctions to which we gave the Bronx Cheer.

The first wise crack I heard was Howard Dietz's. The prof asked him his name.

"Dietz," he said.

"Your Christian name." I mean

"Did you get a good look at my face?" cracked the Dietz.

In those days our Sok (George E. Sokolsky) was an eminent anarchist. He was skinny, with flowing hair, and he lectured all the profs. Walter (Life Begins at Forty) B. Pitkin among them. Jim Larkin was his pal.

Later he went to Russia, got shooed out of there by Trotsky, reached Shanghai and became the big shot of the Far East.

I saw him two weeks ago after 15 years. His hair is short and he weighs 225 pounds. His pal is Tom Lamont now.

And his gang, of course.

We have our inside laughs at each other but you couldn't realize [illegible] apart with a crowbar.

M. Lincoln Schuster wore short pants and was an A student. We all mooched on his brains. We [stil]l do. It's too late for him to do anything about it now.

He won 30 bucks from Brisbane—a prize.

I won 75 cents from Heywood Broun—a crap game.

After that my lungs whooped me to Caranac, Ariz. and everywhere. I spent a fortune trying to patch up the blowouts in those inner tubes and then decided life wasn't worth the bother.

Keats died at 26, and had said everything. De Morgan began clicking with his novels at 60—one the despair and the other the hope of all word-peddlars. You pays your money and takes your Joyce.

Into the picture business and out of it I hobbled, ready for a fight or frolic with a poker chip on each shoulder.

I met big shots until they seemed to assay a dime a dozen. I've eased more big shots on the way to the inevitable grave than comes in the life of most gagsters, and I've been helped more than any other tuberculosfer moseying toward the same ultimate curtain call.

To retail their deeds would only vulgarize the fine quality of friendship on either side, though a few might be related in general terms.

I once sat at a table outside a cafe in Paris with an author and told him the saddest inside story of two brothers, world-known American illustrators, I ever heard. Though they had a $150,000 house, life had licked their love for each other, and one of them went back to their old ten dollar studio to die. The other hasn't been the same since and won't even live in the mansion.

Later the author and I discussed the matter of lending money to friends. I told him I made a policy of giving what I wouldn't miss, instead of loaning what I couldn't afford to lose. I had helped a guy that way that day.

The author asked me how much I made a week. I bragged and said $50, ten over what I did make.

That night before leaving for America he left an envelope for me containing $2000, and to this day, paralyzed with gratitude I still don't know why he did it, except that it made it possible for me to find the leisure to write "Fun in Bed" so that the thousands of others hemmed in linen prisons, in hospitals or at home, might find some amusement to make them forget the intolerable present.

Another friend, a Broadway producer, sent me $1000 out of a fairly clear sky while I was convalescing or dying (it wasn't clear, even to the doctors, which) in a hospital in Nice. It was a year after the 1929 collapse. He begged me not to say anything about it.

MAGRATH ORDERS CONNOLLY DEATH PROBE

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

Here is a somewhat different kind of letter. I do not know how representative it is in its opinion. I have had several letters objecting to the NRA particularly as it applied boycott on small business men who think they cannot live up to its provision.

But this correspondent says that the NRA is the only thing that can save America, that the alternative is revolution as the young people of today are far more radical than the middle-aged group—and that if the NRA fails it will be the fault of the American business man who is not playing fair.

Most comment on the NRA seems to me highly personal and limited in its view. People talk about how they know most personally or about affect them immediately, not all of which helps in reviewing the whole program. But this letter from a gentleman seems to be giving fair a hearing to all of the angles involved. The writer, a man I like as a hopeless conservative. He is a bit afraid of me as a confessed radical. I am to be ordained to call him something of a revolutionist.

"I hope you will not use my name in this letter and I will tell you the facts of myself and my friends. Because I am sure that you will say I am a crank and not understand the point of view of a conservative. I am not a conservative in the sense that I am afraid of change, but I am afraid of the man who is a confessed radical. I am to be ordained to call him something of a revolutionist.

THESE BE TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOULS

(Respectfully Dedicated to Democratic Voters)

Some of the candidates went to Louisville to make the records—tried to save a few cents by getting a cheap card, cheap printing from a cheap printer. If we only known they were getting a cheap card and were getting cheap candidates we could have given them a cheaper one.

It is only every four years that the candidates run and then one of the reasons why we get the worst men in the country in office is because the people don't go to the polls and get their name on the ballot to vote.

...that they miss most upon hearing it applauded.

But, on the other hand, even in dudraisin is willing to make a few concessions go a long way.

Coaches Coming To Regard Grid Writers as Menace ↕ Reporters Supply Scouting Data in The Sport Pages

By AUSTEN LAKE

There is a disarming naivete about your football reporter that even he does not always suspect. For most football writers are merely baseball writers who have been altered to meet the needs of the season and come fresh from a game where reporters are a benevolent, comical set of playfellows who, at worst, are harmless, so that managers and players will humor even their brashest questions with a fond patience. But your football coach covertly regards the football reporter as a growing menace, because he innocently publishes many of their trade secrets which other coaches later pick up in the form of scouting detail or diagrammed plays and use against them.

For example there is a rubber stamp, or stock question that football writers use to open a conversation with a football coach at this stage. They will say, "And what does your basic formation look like?" confidently thrusting out a pencil and a paper so that coach can map his own layout. It has become such a routine part of an interview that Chick Meehan of Manhattan once had cards printed, with a bold face title, "This is my basic formation" on which, very neatly, he had spotted his standard shift with each little circle spaced to scale. And when a reporter would pop the traditional question Chick would snake one of the cards out of his vest and present it without comment.

Not that, for the purposes of football literature, the basic formation makes any difference, because to the naked, non-technical eye, one formation looks pretty much like another. But the writers like to sprinkle their essays with technical data for the authoritative ring that it lends and they will tell you how this coach's shift is a marriage of the Warner B with the Zuppke 2 A with certain individual variations.

The coaches contend that this means virtually nothing to the average football reader, who is less concerned over Fordham's split ends, Notre Dame's forearm shiver, or Holy Cross' shuttling line (No! These are not faked terms) than he is that Purdue is wearing satin pants, kangaroo skin pads and is being served pate of goose livers as a training staple.

There is no objection to writing a column on how a certain coach is going to feed his team beers and ales as a fatigue relief, or how four-fifths of his squad come from Turner Falls. But please don't say that his wingback splits the end and tackle on the strong side, or describe that pet spinner in which a guard comes out to take a lateral pass. Because there will be a lot of other coaches who are subscribing to your paper for just such data, and may come along later and use that information against him.

Joe McKenney Scouted His Own Team for Canisius

So I was not surprised when Eddie Casey, who is a courteous chap with less of the bearish bluntness than most coaches affect, said "No, I will not give you Harvard's basic formation, because I want it to be a surprise when I open the season." And though mine is a more reasonable request I recall a similar reply that Eddie made when that famous radio word painter, Mr. Ted Husing, asked him for a complete set of Harvard's play which were to be used later that afternoon against West Point. "Because," explained Husing, "if I had them clearly diagrammed I could describe them better in my broadcast." Only that time it took Eddie a long time before he could make any answer at all, because he choked on his first six attempts.

I am tempted to say that scouting is a greatly over-rated institution, due to the freemasonry that exists among the coaches, the summer football schools, and the constant interchange of method. And I would illustrate this argument with the story of how Joe McKenney, of Boston College scouted his own team for Canisius of Buffalo a few years back.

Luke Urban, Canisius coach and former B. C. captain complained that he had no funds with whcih to scout B. C and McKenney, who has a kindly heart, gave him a complete list of B. C. plays with diagrams and explanations to match furnishing the most accurate draft of scouting material that has ever been gathered on a single team.

"Only," said Joe, "I cannot tell you when, how or where we will use these plays during the game."

Coaches Even Scout Personalities

The science has been refined to the point where one scout will concentrate on the technical side of a team, studying its spacing, how it spots its backs, how it comes out of the huddle, the possible thrusts from each type of formations, etc. and another scout will study personalities. For example, several seasons ago, Holy Cross had a triple threat man who moistened his fingers when about to throw a pass, who wiped his palms on his hams before kicking and who did neither one when he was going to run. A little nervous trick of adjusting a headgear or setting the cleats before a certain type of play may betray a team's entire offense. Such things are duck soup for the scouts. And particularly do they watch the feet of the running guards, to discover whether they fidget before pulling out of the line, or whether a tackle leans in the direction of his forthcoming block.

I recall a painful scene at Lafayette some years ago, when the team was preparing for its game with Pennsylvania. The scouts had spied on the Penn team the week previous from opposite sides of the field in order to observe the game at cross angles. But when they came to lecture on their finding before the assembled Lafayette squad, their information was at such odds that the session broke up when one scout punched the other scout on his nose, and Wilmer Crowell, the head coach, soothed everybody by pointing out, "Well, it does not matter. The boys probably would not have paid any attention anyway."

The most exhaustive scouting system in the country is maintained at West Point where tons of charts, photos, diagrams and data on almost every college team in the country is filed away in the athletic officer's archives. It is the accumulation of material gathered by countless army officers, who, being stationed in various forts, or with college units, use their training in military intelligence to scout teams that some day might play their beloved academy.

I will say that college coaches, on the whole, are a forbearing lot and while, when they are asked, "And now what does your basic formation look like?" they probably would prefer to nab the questioner by the nose, they usually resign themselves to drawing the diagram in the hope that the writer will mess up the description and leave them no worse off.

MOREY PREDICTS BATES WILL GIVE HARVARD GRID BATTLE

MAY ASK CASEY TO SCOUT OWN ELEVEN

By BILL GRIMES

Lewiston, Sept. 18—With the alumni field inundated by the heavy rains of the past 24 hours, Bates football [illegible] practice session of the [illegible] day in the Colon [illegible] cage under the watchful eye of Coach Dave Morey.

"As football is strictly an outdoor game, I presume it is a bad omen to start the season indoors," said Coach Morey, who is now eligible for the fat men's class, weighing 201 pounds, "but we are so pressed for time that I had no choice."

"Having lost 18 lettermen, I cannot afford to wait for the weather man to start smiling. I have considerable magic to perform and not being a Thurston or a Houdini and lacking even their props, I must get to work, for Bates opens its 1933 season one week from Saturday with Arnold and then plays Harvard and Dartmouth."

Bill Pricher is the only regular back Morey has from last year and in order to get some ball carriers and blockers he intends to convert some linemen into backfield men. Bates is sure to miss Walter Gay, who starred in that now famous 0 to 0 Yale game last fall and the same is true of Dayton Taylor, Winchester, and Frank Murray [illegible].

"Taylor is touring Europe, while Murray is on a transcontinental trip with the debating club. Gay, who is a junior, has wound up his career on the gridiron. He was badly pummelled last year and suffered from almost constant headaches, so in view of the fact that he had contracted infantile paralysis during his early boyhood, I refused to put my sanction to his returning to the squad, regardless of the great loss to the college and myself as the coach."

Leni Lenzi, who hails from Plymouth, Mass., [illegible] another [illegible] Bates is going to [illegible]. Lenzi was a half back but he was not to return to college due to the death of his father.

Morey believes that he will have a fair line [illegible] to give Harvard and Dartmouth [illegible] work out.

"Unfortunately I will not have an opportunity to get any reports on the Crimson before we go into action in the Stadium, one week from Saturday. I am seriously considering writing Eddie Casey to get some information of the Harvard offense."

"We received a fine guarantee from the Harvard Athletic Association and therefore I believe that we should be prepared to offer some opposition or otherwise the game will be of little or no value to the Crimson. Bates has not the remotest chance of defeating Harvard or even holding Eddie Casey's charges to a low score. If, however, I had some inkling as to the offense we will be up against, I feel that Harvard would be the gainer. Otherwise, I must review all of the outstanding offenses, in the hopes that one of these will be in vogue at Cambridge."

"Dave, what is your reaction on small college elevens playing big universities?" I queried.

"Personally I am for it. I cannot agree with those who proclaim it is a foolhardy and hazardous undertaking for the small college teams. When I was at Middlebury, I brought squads to Harvard and Columbia and none of my players ever met with serious injuries and since I came to Bates I have taken teams to Cambridge and New Haven and come home with squads which gained, not only experience but whose morale was higher."

Although Bates did not win the state title last year, I am of the belief that if Bates had not played and held Yale to a tie, it would have been badly routed in its remaining games. It was not a strong team a year ago but the players had football instinct and with the exception of Tufts no college scored more [illegible] touchdowns on them.

If Morey has anything here this season, the Harvard and Dartmouth games will bring it out. And, by the same token, if Bates is a wash out, Morey will be cognizant of the conditions before he starts the state series, which is the Bates objective.

"The time is short, and my material shorter, but I will guarantee that the Bates team I send into the Harvard game will know what it's all about, and that the Crimson authorities will be satisfied with our exhibition and the caliber of our football."

For the next 10 days Coach Morey will drive the Bates squad through two sessions daily. The squad is not only small, but green, and, as he is the only coach with the varsity, "Dartmouth Dave" has his work cut out for him. With the opening of college Sept. 28, the freshman candidates will be called out, and Buck Spinks, who played under and then assisted Dave Morey at Auburn, will coach the yearlings, while Ray McClusky who played football for two years here at Bates, will act as varsity trainer this fall.

3 INELIGIBLES NOW STARS FOR HARVARD

Although the current grid season at Cambridge is only two days old, even at this early date the success of the Harvard squad this fall appears to rest squarely on the shoulders of three players who only a year ago were forbidden places in the select varsity group to which they now belong.

As members of that band of ineligibles which daily takes all that the varsity has to offer and then comes back for more, they did their part in preparing the Crimson machine for its regular season tests, although prevented by faculty ban from participating in an intercollegiate contest themselves.

These three lads, Dave Kopans of Dorchester; John R. "Bob" Haley, of Winthrop, and Nat Tennew, of Cambridge, all three products of Greater Boston scholastic football, hold in their hands the solution of most of Eddie Casey's problems.

School Grid Year on in Earnest This Week

By BILL CONNELL

School football toddles into the starting number of the Marathon dance of the gridiron this week, with the finest set of opening contests in years programmed for Saturday.

Wakefield at Malden, Keith Academy at Salem, Rindge Tech at Waltham, and Newton at Arlington are samples of the type of game listed.

The vital thing in the scholastic football annually is the state championship, even though it isn't official, for after the season gets rolling the possible rulers for the year will commence to draw the big crowds. And the big money.

So this week's duels are important, for three teams which may reach the throne are involved in openers which can wreck the title chances.

THREE FEATURE TILTS

Newton, Salem and Malden are the [illegible] At Lane one of the spark plugs in the attack, may stop Newton. Keith, with a strong team, has enough to test Bill Broderick's Salem steamroller. Wakefield may put the skids under Malden.

Salem and Malden and Newton will be the favored teams, but each is worried, and with good reason.

Denny Gildea's Everett whirlwind plays host to Warwick high from Rhode Island. Here a possible change for Everett is guessing for it knows little regarding Warwick except that the team will be fairly heavy.

Everett, with its three sets of backs and good line has the edge. One backfield has Joe Schwerdt at quarter and Joe Pini, Charlie Dupont and John Rosetti. The second includes Jerry John on as pilot with Nick Belafatto, Art Ramo and Sam Gentile. The third set is not as strong as the above fours, but is very capable.

Jack Leary, with higher hopes than he has had for several years at Waltham, sends his boys against Rindge Tech, which has a good line and may prove a tough [illegible] even.

Jack Sheehan, new head coach at Cambridge Latin, starts his group against a high grade eleven at Haverhill in St. James high. The Cantabs have Frank Crawley, triple threat quarterback for their king pin.

Revere high plays one of its few home games against Lynn English. Tom Whelan's Lynn team had the benefit of a camping trip before the season, and so has a margin on Revere, which lost most of its veterans from the fast 1932 team.

G. E. GOES TO MEDFORD

Lynn General Electric Apprentices go to Medford for their first game. It may be the second go for the Lynn team, as its postponed game of Saturday with Salem is likely to go on tomorrow or Wednesday. At any rate, the Apprentices will be able foes for the new Medford team. Eddie Brooks' first as head coach. Medford is light so the mentors are trying to make up with speed for that lack.

Danvers, unbeaten last year, is riddled by graduation, but Charley Vye has been driving his squad for the go Saturday at Beverly. The home team's material is not as strong as Coach "Bodger" Carroll would like. Danvers may open its card as it did last year when it started with a conquest of Beverly in one of the season's big surprises.

The top team of 1932 was Brockton. But 10 of the players graduated, leaving only a hollow shell for this campaign. Coach Marion Roberts always does well, regardless of the kind of material at the Shoe City, and his [illegible] is fast taking form for its [illegible] this week when it is visited by Taunton.

The other games are listed below. By and large they stand out as the finest school opening clashes in years. A lively week-end p. m. is ahead for the grid bugs.

NEW FIELD FOR MELROSE HIGH

Construction of a new athletic field [illegible] the new Melrose High school from DeMar Field, is announced by Superintendent of Schools Herman H. [illegible] and Headmaster W[illegible] Sprague of Melrose High today.

The new field will be [illegible] DeMar Field [illegible] between DeMar Field and Melrose High school towards the rear of the lot, the school department will also build several tennis courts, which will be ready for use next season.

Melrose plans an extensive program of athletics for all high [illegible] with every pupil required to participate in out of door games every school day unless excused by certificate from the family physician.

The school also plans to develop more branches of athletics for both boys and girls. Tennis will be made a major sport for both boys and girls. The school is located opposite the municipal bathing beach and new [illegible] on aquatic teams will be developed to represent the school. Class and inter-class teams are to be developed in every school major sport.

EAGLES PLAN FLASHY GRID ATTACK

By WALTER KILEY

More attention to offense than to defense, a wide open attack paying particular stress on the forward pass weapon, should make Boston College football far more attractive to the public this fall than in many seasons past. Each succeeding scrimmage at the Heights brings home the fact the more, that Coach Joe McKenney and his assistants, have definitely committed themselves to a policy of carrying the play into the other fellow's back yard, under the principle that "The best defense is a good offense."

The attitude at the Heights is that the only way to keep football flourishing is to make the game attractive and the only way to make it attractive is to make the plays interesting.

Following along even further in line with the thought recently expressed by Glenn S. Warner, B. C. authorities find that the only way to have the play interesting is to produce a scoring team, one that flashes brilliantly at times with a long open field run or a deftly caught forward which culminates in a touchdown.

PLAYS THAT PLEASE

McKenney feels that the first step towards aiding the offense rather than the defense was started this summer when the rules committee legislated on sideline play, [illegible] that the ball shall be brought in ten yards from the side line whenever it becomes dead anywhere within ten yards of a sideline.

The Boston College coach knows that a constant forward pass threat especially when in the defensive zone will make the other fellow employ a six-man line, which automatically gives the attacking team a better opportunity for [illegible] through the line should it decide to run such plays.

SIX-MAN LINE

In the meanwhile, McKenney will be aided should the opponent or the game in general open up as he [illegible] a six-man line with a 2—3 or a 3—2 defense. He feels that defense against the forward weakens the line and makes running plays possible.

Denny McNamara has worked wonders with his backfield passers and the same can be said of Bill Ormsby who has been specializing in coaching his receivers.

Johnny Freitas, Tom Blake, Tom Brennan and George Maiocca are backs who have proved their passing worth. In fact, Backfield Coach McNamara insists that every one of his backs must be able to excel in this department if he is to be kept on the squad.

Capt. Maloney, Ed Kelley, Jake Driscoll, Phil Flaherty and Joe Curran of the backfield have each shown adeptness for running passes, while Ty Anderson and Ramsey have been drilled so thoroughly as ends on the air game that it is safe to say that they will hold their own in the fast company to which they will shortly be subjected.

CANZONERI TRIES AND FAILS

By DAVID F. EGAN

A swarthy, chunky little man with the features of Babe Ruth cashed in his fistic chips last week, and I suppose that old Pete Herman down there in N'Awlyans was sad at heart.

Some 10 years ago, before Pete went blind, he saw a friendly little boot-black in the gymnasium. To the boy, Herman was an idol, for he was champion of the little fellows who fight with their fists for a living. And Pete, without condescension, showed the black-haired, smiling little Italian some small part of his great fund of fistic knowledge.

Herman went blind, because a bewildered opponent shoved a gloved thumb in his eye one night, and the little boot-black left for New York, to become the greatest lightweight champion since Benny Leonard.

His name is Tony Canzoneri, and last week, he lost for the second time to Barney Ross of Chicago. The bout was described as "furious," and that adjective came as no surprise to those who have followed Canzoneri from the obscurity of a dingy gymnasium in New Orleans to the bright lights of the Garden in New York.

Squire Jack Sharkey was scheduled to box King Levinsky, the fighting fish pedlar, in Chicago last Friday night, but if J. Flavius and the promoter can get together, the bout will be held this evening. If the Squire still retains any of his fighting form, the slow-thinking, awkward Levinsky should be a double-barrelled pop-over for him.

But there goes the Colonel again, proving the old adage, "Once a wrong guesser, always a boxing expert."

SCHOOLBOYS WASHED AWAY

By BILL CONNELL

Out of the soft stretch and into the tense drive of the blood and thunder stage did scholastic football plough the week past. For some of the squads the days meant opening drills, but many were in their second or third week of tuning. The latter class began to show flickers and flashes of the harmony in motion which they will maintain, a bit later.

At this point much of the appraisal of school elevens is a hazardous process. Yet it is possible to tag a number of the teams which have displayed the power, or speed, or brains, or in a few cases all three, to keep them in the van all autumn.

Lynn Classical, Salem, Malden, Everett, Newton could be seen stretching and growing into powerful machines. In the Boston schools work was just beginning, so rating these on the toll of the week would be guesswork.

A notable point was the attention coaches gave to signal drill. A large number have switched from the huddle to the older fashioned but snappier signal barking. A big majority of those coaches who held to the huddle admitted they did so only because of a lack of the kind of quarterbacking needed to warrant scrapping the back-to-the-line camp meetings.

COLLEGE GRIDMEN MARK TIME

By WALTER KILEY

With Brown and Tufts making their first appearances today and all other conservatives already swung into line, it is safe to say that football is now well established and making its annual bid to crowd baseball, golf and yachting from first position on the fall sports pages of the nation.

A few college games were played last Saturday, but most of these were among southern teams and involved few of the more prominent exponents.

More than a hundred games are scheduled for next Saturday but, here, too, we find that most of them are slated for distant gridirons, New England mostly awaiting the last Saturday in September and the first in October for its opening barrage.

California, Stanford and Southern California break out in Pacific Coast competition next Saturday, Manhattan meets St. Bonaventure in New York, Rhode Island State plays Brooklyn College at Kingston, and Canisius clashes with Albion at Buffalo.

Many of the leading southern teams make their debuts this week, chiefly Vanderbilt and Southern Methodist.

On the 30th, our local colleges will fall into the parade, Boston College entertaining St. Anselm's at University Heights, Middlebury coming to Riverside to play Boston University, Dartmouth and Norwich getting together at Hanover, Holy Cross and St. Michael's at Worcester, Maine and Rhode Island at Orono, Massachusetts State and Cooper Union at Amherst, Springfield and East Stroudsburg at Springfield, and Vermont and Connecticut State at Burlington, among others.

Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Tufts and Brown open on Oct. 7.

Only two radical changes have been made in the rules this fall which means that both the players and the spectators will have a clearer conception and less confusion than in several years as to what is happening on the field of play.

The first change relates to a ball which becomes dead within 10 yards of a sideline or when a ball goes out of bounds between the sidelines. When this occurs, the ball shall be put into play at a spot 10 yards in from that sideline and on a line drawn.

This new rule will allow greater freedom in choice of plays when near the edge of the field. It will do away with the necessity of wasting a play by carrying the ball out of bounds in order to get the ball into favorable position for a running play.

It will provide an extra advantage for broken field running for the carrier will not be impressed with the idea of going out of bounds if he looks to be trapped but will take a chance of ducking back towards the middle and possibly shaking himself loose for added yardage.

The other change has to do with clipping. The old rule has been broadened and now includes blocking by running or diving into the back of a player not carrying the ball, in addition to throwing or dropping the body across the back of the leg or legs below the knees of such a player. The penalty for such infractions will in the future be limited to 15 yards, 10 yards less than formerly, the intention of the rule being that officials will be less lax in calling such penalties in the future.

YACHTSMEN CALLED TO CHOWDER

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Yachting for 1933 came officially to an end yesterday as the sailormen sipped their chowder while dodging the torrents at the Corinthian Yacht Club in Marblehead and the South Boston Yacht Club at City Point. Within a few days practically all the racing craft will have gone to the yards for winter storage, and only the slightly dizzy Frostbiters, sailing their little 11-foot dinghies on Marblehead harbor and later the Charles River Basin, keep the sport going. Bowling, cold weather pastime of the Boston Bay skippers, will start in a few weeks.

After writing all summer of the exploits of junior yachtsmen, it was a pleasure to see a crew of real veterans finally come through with an important victory. Charles P. Curtis, who won the Eastern Challenge Cup at Marblehead in his eight-meter sloop Ellen, was sailing boats before most of us were born. He ranks with Charles Francis Adams and C. H. W. Foster as the real veterans of yatch racing in this country. His racing dates back to the early days of the Quincy Cup, and his Sonder boats, named Ellen then as his craft always are now—were famous thirty years ago.

Curtis, though a past commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club which offered the trophy, was sailing under the colors of the Boston Yacht Club, an organization in which he has been a member for many years.

Already plans for another summer afloat are being discussed where yachtsmen gather. Stories are heard of two or three new Q boats for Marblehead, although no contracts with designers have been signed yet. At Bristol they are experimenting with a sailing catamaram, speedy racing machine of a type once popular. And England still has two months in which to file its possible challenge for the America's Cup.

GIANTS WORK THE MIRACLE

By JOE CASHMAN

The miracle was accomplished on Friday.

Bill Terry's Giants, unanimously picked to finish no higher than sixth in the pre-season forecasts, clinched the National League pennant by taking a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs, defending champions.

The New Yorkers actually settled the issue in the memorable series with the Braves at the Wigwam, a fortnight ago, but the skeptics died hard. They were all from Missouri until the pace-setters went West and proved their class.

So the 1933 World Series, starting Oct. 3 by Thursday order of Commissioner Landis, will open on the Polo Grounds, which has been without a title clash since 1924. And, oddly enough, the opposition will be furnished by the Washington Senators, who played the same role in the classic nine falls back.

New York gets the first two games; Washington the next three, if a fifth is necessary. Should further contests be required, they'll be staged in Gotham.

And because of the nearness of the two cities, no off day will be needed to make the jump. The games will be played daily for the first time since '24.

Judge Landis must believe prosperity has returned. It cost the Yanks and Cubs countless thousands of dollars last season because the Commissioner stuck to the custom of selling tickets in three-game blocks and stubbornly refused to allow vacant seats to be filled by selling single game tickets at the box offices.

"I'll think it over next year," was his reply to all pleas. His Thursday answer was that all traditional rules and regulations for the series would be followed to the letter this year.

Few National League clubs in the past decade have proven as worthy of the flag as the current edition of the Giants.

They grabbed the lead very early in the race and held it week after week, month after month, despite the efforts of four strong rivals and the ridicule of the nation's press.

Except for one seven-game losing streak, the Terrymen played championship ball all the way.

The feature of their play has been their ability to rise to supreme heights when the occasion demanded. They were often on the spot and always escaped.

They were soft for the Braves before the crucial series. Then they turned around and won four out of five. They dropped the first two games of their series in Chicago, which brought their string of defeats on Wrigley Field up to six straight. The next day, they captured both ends of the all-important doubleheader.

They came through in the pinches and won the fight on the road, conclusive signs of greatness.

The National League has its best chance for a decisive World Series victory since the Giants of 1922 won four in a row from the Yanks with a tie game sandwiched in.

Gardner, Sept. 18—The home high school football team prepared today for its twilight contest here this afternoon with the strong Maynard team. The game was listed Saturday, but the rain caused the cancellation.

Both teams were weakened by graduation last June, but have come along nicely.

Their contest of today was to be one of the first twi school football games ever staged.

Wally Berger is Influenza Victim

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 18—Walter Berger, Braves ace outfielder, remained in Pittsburgh when his mates departed for Cincinnati, and passed a comfortable Sabbath at the home of the Pirates. Walter's case was diagnosed as grip.

The attending physician saw much improvement in his patient today.

Walter probably will join his mates in Philadelphia Friday. He is quartered at the Schenley Hotel.

$300,000 Bleacher for Fenway Park

Officials of the Red Sox today informed Mayor Curley at a meeting in City Hall that wooden stands at Fenway Park will be removed and concrete bleachers costing $300,000 will be substituted for them. Work will begin within 30 days.

In attendance at today's meeting were Tom Yawkey, president of the Red Sox; Eddie Collins, general manager of the club, and P. P. Evans of Cleveland, an engineer.

By JOE CASHMAN

It won't be long now.

Seven more games and Boston baseball season will be just another forgotten pleasant memory.

Two weeks will be required to run off the remaining tilts. The magnates agreed to seven open dates during the final fortnight merely to get in Sunday Oct 1. When they count the cash taken in on that day, most of them will probably wish they had arranged to close a week earlier.

A radical change in schedule is likely next season. Pennsylvania is expected to pass the Sunday sports bill, permitting the Athletics, Phils and Pirates to play at home on the Sabbath. That would make it impracticable to extend the race beyond Sept. 15, unless synthetic doubleheaders were prohibited or the schedules lengthened to 168 games.

The Red Sox have four and the Braves three of the remaining local tilts.

Tainted out of an entire four-game series with the White Sox, the Fenway flock were to try to open a two-game engagement with the Cleveland Indians at the Fens this afternoon.

JUDGE BACK AT FIRST

The Tribe is the Pale Hose can prove be a red hot contender at the expense of the Sox. Wednesday, the scrappers from Chicago will be connected to the Forest City nine with Judge Emil Fuchs at first base.

Joe Judge, ex-Sox player who was with Mickey and he back on first base and may be persuaded to join Cooke and Almada when if ever the Fenway luck changes from bad to worse. Manager Joseph M Mundy and he are old pals.

After the Johnson club will come the Yankees on Saturday and Sunday. The Sox will be then through at home for the season, except for the annual charity game with the Braves at the Wigwam a week from Wednesday.

The Braves will finish the season's campaign at home, Phils at the Tepee on the following Saturday and Sunday.

WHY SUDDEN CHILL?

Your correspondent can't recall when there was less late-season interest in baseball hereabouts than at the present. Only the chilly plash is likely to attract more than a corporal's guard from here in.

This summer's difficult to explain. It would seem as though the Sox and Braves were being penalized for being successful.

We of course are speaking comparatively. Second division clubs could hardly be termed successful but both native entries promise to finish up with their best records in a decade.

The Sox have already won 17 more games than they turned in last season. If they can take three of their remaining eight games, they'll break the 1930 mark of .500 per centage than in 1930, when they landed in sixth place and made their finest showing in 10 years.

Last season was the most prosperous in 12 for the Braves. They raced home in fifth place with a .500 percentage. There's a cross that mars this year providing they win four of the dozen games still on their card.

Griffiths About Through

Griffiths was around Trafton a 2100 wearing eyeglasses. He said he can't see out of one of them and that he is ready to quit the game. Tuffs told me he has lost $100,000 of his ring earnings in part to opposite Israel Levy of the moon.

Griffiths once collected $25,000 for a bout with Max Levin at the Garden.

Giants Are Tough

The Senators would do well to duplicate the Giants' performance the way they knocked off the Braves and Cubs in important clashes. Bill Terry's players have plenty of courage. They will prove a hard team for the Senators to beat.

A Century of Progress has taken Chicago's hotels out of the red. They are still doing capacity business here at the better class hotels. They have a waiting list at the Edgewater Beach. Hotel where we are drumming out the well known column as we look out of the window of our room at Lake Michigan at the hottest days of May. Last Sunday and Labor Day were the big nights.

Most of the Century of Progress may be repeated next year. It has been that successful.

REDSKINS TIE PACKERS, 7-7

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP)—Stripped and surprised by a powerful and determined group of young stars, the Green Bay Packers had to be satisfied with a 7 to 7 tie against the Boston Redskins as the two elevens opened the National Professional Football League season on the Packers' gridiron at Green Bay, Wis.

Portsmouth and Cincinnati also played their initial game of the year, and the Spartans beat the Cincinnati 21 to 0.

The Packers, usually one of the strongest teams in the circuit, managed to take a 7 to 0 lead in the third period with two passes from the 20-yard Line. The first into Herber to Grove, was good for 15 yards and then after two line bucks, which cost them a yard Herber passed to Rose, who raced over the line for six points. Grove added the extra point.

Boston scored its touchdown in the closing minutes of play also via the aerial route when the Packers' secondary defense became confused. Westfall passed to Franklin, who hiked 20 yards. Musick kicked safely.

Browning Is Rated Wrestling Champion by Jack Curley

Chicago, Sept. 19—On the eve of a new wrestling season, Jack Curley, mat authority, yesterday announced his annual rating of the four leading professional wrestlers of the world. The rating:

No. 1—Jim Browning, Joplin, Mo.
No. 2—Ed Don George, Java, N. J.
No. 3—Joe Savoldi, Three Oaks, Mich.
No. 4—Jim London, Athens, Greece.

In explaining the annual listing of the four greatest matmen whom no doubt will be looked upon officially as other grappling authorities and followers of the sport, Curley said:

"There is no question about Browning being champion. He defeated Ed "Strangler" Lewis for the title and successfully defended the crown by holding Savoldi to a draw in a drenching rainstorm at the Yankee Stadium. He is ready to defend his title at any time like a real champion should."

Curley also will be added in his wrestling promotion this season by the active Jos "Toots" Mondi, is eager to co-operate with the State Athletic Commission and leave no doubt as to who is the rightful titleholder, as George and Savoldi also claim the championship.

"Jumping Joe's" claim to the championship comes by his victory over London in Chicago early this year, while George [illegible] as the titleholder [illegible] and Canada because [illegible] triumph over Henry [illegible] latter won from [illegible] recognized.

A squad of 30 football candidates reported to Head Coach Lew Manly at Tufts Oval this morning as the Jumbos officially launched their training season.

Most of the morning was given over to the usual opening day ceremonies but Backfield Coach Charlie Hingston was able to devote a half hour to a starting and passing [illegible]. Joe Bachrach [illegible] a weekend [illegible].

Some 10 or 15 additional candidates are expected to be required within the next few days, including a few regulars who failed to show this morning.

MANY LETTER MEN

Seldom has a Jumbo's squad started off with such an imposing array of veteran talent. As the team takes shape there is a new caliber for every one of the 11 positions, although newcomers from freshman ranks will undoubtedly be given a chance. A typical line for the opening game with Coney at Waterville, Me., on Oct. 7 [illegible] who reported were Bill Stafford, Harold McMahon, Raymie McLean, Walter Froelich, Pat Clark and Dick Hingston, brother of the backfield coach, all backs; Fred Oliver, Clarence Hamilton and Johnny Grinnell, ends; Ed Batchelder and Carlin Park [illegible] Lou Lindquist, Sam Fox [illegible] Mel Sullivan and Joe Regent, guards; Capt. The Boys Talk It All Over

Marshall, McManus Are Ace Switch Hitters in Fanning Bee | Col. Egan Gets Earful of Grid and Baseball —And Vice Versa

By DAVID F. EGAN

Persons are peculiar, just to make an original remark.

Take George "Long Tim Linen" Marshall, the president and high bankroll man of the Boston Red Sox, and Marty McManus, the foreman of the Boston Red Sox, just for instance. Or take them for better or worse, if you please. Take them one way or another, for your money has to write a story.

We were sitting in a [illegible] at [illegible]—Marshall, McManus, Phillip Troy and I—after the Red Sox had lost a particularly heartbreaking game to the Senators.

The train [illegible] from Washington to New York, leaving the miles behind in a sputtering stream of smoke and steam and cinders. Mr. Marshall, flinging his long legs around until he had wound them into a position of solid comfort, lit a new and expensive cigar, and fixed the moody McManus with his sparkling eye.

Marshall, the owner of the baseball team, took the stand, and McManus, the manager of the club, appeared for the defense, in answer to what the following manner.

The Owner of the Football Team: "Marty, all you need to have a first division club is about three players. You have the best young pitching staff in the league. You have a swell catcher in Ferrell. You have—"

The Manager of the baseball Team (interrupting): "But George, how will [illegible] second to [illegible] go in Boston this fall? I think it has it all over [illegible] football. Last fall I saw a game in St. Louis, and if you don't [illegible] you."

The Owner: "There is absolutely no comparison between professional and college football. And speaking of baseball, by the way, I've got a young, fast, hard-hitting outfielder, a couple of infielders who don't trip over their own feet; and—"

The Manager chastily: "The St. Louis fellow I was just mentioning doesn't trip over his own feet. When he grabs that ball and starts off fuckle or around the end, clear the track for Casey Jones. He points and passes."

The Owner (speaking about passes, there is the worst evil in professional sport. Clark Griffith has the right idea. Why, even One-Eared Connolly would need a crow bar to get through the pass gate in Washington. Remember that, Egan, when the Redskins open in Boston."

The Manager—"But I was speaking about forward passes, George. The new professional rule that you can throw them from any point behind the line of scrimmage [illegible] should speed up the game no end. This fellow I was speaking of, Benny—"

The Owner—"Remember Benny Myers, that leather lunged coach who use to shout, 'THE INFIELDERS IN, AND THE OUTFIELDERS OUT'?"

The Manager: "This fellow was in the backfield for St. Louis University. You fellows think that all the football players come from California or the Big 10. Take a look at this Benny."

The Owner: "They tell me that Benny Tate was getting $10,000 a year when he played for Bob Quinn. He wasn't worth within thousands of that, even in his best days. The Red Sox don't want players like that. Eddie Collins has the right idea. He wants fast, ambitious youngsters."

The Manager—"Well, this fellow is fast and ambitious and young. (Hastily, for fear of interruption) His name's Benny LaPresta, and he's the best halfback I've ever laid eyes on."

The Owner—"Washington to win the World Series. Of course, they'll have to get past Hubbell, New York—"

The Manager (pointedly) "New York will grab this fellow if you don't, and I'm telling you something—"

The Owner (yawning): "What's his name? LaPresta? I'll look him up."

So on the recommendation of Marty McManus, the manager, Mr. George Marshall, the owner, looked up Ben Tate, [illegible] man named Benny LaPresta, and at last reports, he is one of the backs on whom Leon Star Boss and George Marshall depend to bring a football championship to Fenway Park.

The [illegible] incidentally, got [illegible] to a sprinting start yesterday when they held the famous Green Bay Packers to a 7-7 draw. And I suppose that last night, Marshall was laying down his views on the coming World Series to whomever would lend an ear, for, as I've said, persons are peculiar.

Plan to Put Cotton Higher Is Advanced

Washington, Sept. 18 (AP)—A suspension of the ginning and selling of cotton unless prices for the staple advance to a profitable level was advocated before a cotton aid-inflation conference of Southern representatives here today by J. S. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association.

Address of a meeting presided over by Senator Smith (D-SC) chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Wannamaker who comes from St. Matthews, S. C. said:

"If we can not get relief otherwise, the cotton growers, with the farmers of allied lines, should take steps to protect ourselves by discontinuing the ginning or selling of cotton and to drastically reduce cotton acreage."

Wannamaker made this statement after listing the following aims:

"To ask 15 cents a pound for short staple middling grades.

"To immediately inflate the currency.

"To have the government rescind the order calling for the immediate sale of 635,000 bales of cotton to cover crop-production loans.

"To suspend the processing tax on cotton immediately.

"To demand $75 a ton for cottonseed.

"To permit the placing by farmers of cotton in warehouses and to advance them 5¢ a bale for expenses of handling the cotton."

Assailing the processing tax, Wannamaker said he was asking for nothing because it is what farmers are supposed to get it and to declare there has not been a cent paid out.

"The processing tax under the agricultural adjustment administration was fixed at 42 cents a pound.

Wannamaker responded by saying that the convention should first consider what we shall ask the government to do and what we shall ask the government to undo.

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS ARE MIXED

New York, Sept. 18—Price changes for leading shares were mixed in today's dealings on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks and staples shuffled about about irregularly despite the inflationary implications of another sharp slump in intertional dollar rates.

Diverse currents tossed leading shares about indiscriminately after a brisk upward movement in the frist hour which was led by mining and oil issues. Although the petroleum group maintained most of its advance, the metal equities shaded their early gains.

The utilities generally were soft and the rails were subjected to some pleasure at one time. The American monetary unit dropped to about 65 cents in terms of the French gold franc and was off nearly 10 cents in relation to the British pound sterling.

While cotton got up around $1.50 a bale, grains turned hesitant after wheat opened a cent a bushel higher. Other comodities were mixed. Bonds were a trifle nervous.

Shares of Homestake Mining spurted some 10 points and U. S. Smelting jumped around 4, but later relinquished part of this advance. American Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine, Dome and International Nickel were up fractionally to more than a point.

The gold mining and liquor shares in the initial hour were leaders on the upside. Homestake Mining was up 4 points, McIntyre Porcupine 1½ and Dome Mines 1¾. American Commercial Alcohol was up 2 points, and National Distillers up 1½.

Advances of 2 or more points came for American Can, U. S. Smelting, Lehman, Continental Can and Air Reduction.

U. S. Steel sold mostly unchanged. Point or better gains for J. I. Case, Goodyear, American Smelting, Lackawanna and New York Central.

Commodities aided the bulls with good advances in cotton and grains.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 830,000 shares.

In the second hour activity dwindled. The mining shares gained further strength while alcohols eased slightly. Oils firmed in moderate demand. McIntyre and U. S. Smelting extended their net advances to more than 3 points each. Amerada Corporation and Standard Oil of California advanced more than a point apiece. Goodyear and other rubber shares were firm by noon.

Sales at noon approximated 1,330,000 shares.

Going into the third hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange the whole market turned sharply lower on heavy volume with losses of 2 points or more from the early highs the general rule. Chrysler broke $2 from its early top of 32½. Steel 2⅜ to 52⅜, American Commercial Alcohol almost $4 to 67½ and National Distillers about $3 to 107½.

American Can dropped over 2 to 96⅛, United States Industrial Alcohol about 4 to 75½ and United States Smelting 3¼ to 101. American Smelting on heavy volume sank more than 1 from its high to around 47.

Utilities, which were under pressure from the start in spite of the strength in the general list earlier, declined even further with the general reaction, Consolidated Gas of New York touching a new low on the move.

The decline proved to be shortlived, however, with prices quickly rebounding from their lows about midway through the third hour.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 1,950,000 shares.

In the fourth hour prices were mixed. Mining shares continued to exhibit strength. Homestake was up 11 points. Amerihan Smelting sold up 2 and Federal Mining up 10. U. S. Smelting added 1½ points.

Goodyear was up a point. Allied Chemical rose 3 points. U. S. Steel was down 2⅜ and especially weak.

Shares down a point or so included Safeway Stores, American Telephone, General Motors, Consolidated Gas of New York, du Pont, J. I. Case, Columbian Carbon and Owens-Illinois. American Can sold up 2 points.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 2,220,000 shares.

Grains Are Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP)—Wheat bounded sharply above $1 a bushel early today. A lively advance in British exchange, together with opening upturns of securities at New York, gave fresh stimulus to buyers of grain.

Opening ¾-2 cents up, wheat later reacted to a material extent from initial top figures. Corn started unchanged to 1⅛ higher and then underwent a general sag.

London Stores of Crude Rubber Off

London, Sept. 18—Stores of crude rubber on hand here on September 16 totaled 39,191 tons, a decrease of 66 tons from a week ago. Liverpool stocks decreased 387 tons to 56,826 tons.

French Outlook on Keeping Gold Flag Uncertain

New York, Sept. 18—Wall Street is intensely interested in how long France will be able to bear the banner for the gold standard countries.

"Ever since the United States abandoned the gold standard," says the Business Conditions Weekly of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, "there has been serious question as to how long the other countries will be able to maintain their currencies on a gold basis. In recent weeks the large budgetary deficit of the French government, estimated at about 6,000,000,000 francs, has again caused discussion as to whether or not France will remain on the gold standard or will follow the steps taken by the United States and Great Britain. Aside from the budget problem, which is of course a pressing one and is causing a great deal of concern in economic and political circles in France, there is little danger that the country will be forced off the gold standard in the very near future. The long-term outlook, however, is less certain.

"The gold holdings of the Bank of France on Sept. 7 amounted to 82,277,000,000 francs, constituting a gold reserve against notes in circulation of approximately 100 per cent. The bank now holds gold in excess of the minimum gold reserve required by law to the amount of about $1,800,000,000.

"Developments during the last few years have substantially reduced the income of France from abroad and there is every indication that this trend will continue for some time to come and will probably require the export of gold from France."

FAVORITE CAKE WITH COFFEE FILLING AND NUT FROSTING

Beat ¾ cup butter to a cream, gradually beat in 1¼ cups sugar, the beaten yolks of four eggs, ½ cup cold water, 2½ cups flour, sifted with 3 tsps. baking powder and lastly the whites of the four eggs, beaten dry. Bake in two layers. Put the layers together with Coffee Filling and cover the top with Maple Nut Frosting. The filling and frosting are particularly good with chocolate cake.

BOSTON TESTED AMERICAN

Filling

Stir one cup of brown sugar with ¼ cup each of strong coffee and cream until the sugar is melted. Wash down the sides of the saucepan to remove grains of sugar. Cover and let boil to the soft ball stage; add 1 tbsp. butter and beat a little, then spread on one layer of the cake, cover with the other layer and when cold top with Maple Nut Frosting.

Boil 1¼ cups of maple syrup and one generous spoonful of Karo to 240 F. Pour in a fine stream on the whites of two eggs, beaten light, beating constantly meanwhile, add the nuts and when cooled somewhat use as indicated.

TRIPE SUPREME

Wash tripe in cold water. Cover with cold water in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Remove and dry well with a soft cloth, and cut into serving pieces the size of bacon strips. Mince one small onion and three sprigs of parsley. Sprinkle over slices of tripe and season with salt and pepper. Lay a slice of bacon on top of each slice and roll up evenly and tie in place with twine. Put ½ cup each of diced carrots, onions and mushrooms in a saucepan, add 2 cups water. Place the tripe around the outer edge at the top. Bring to boil and simmer gently for two hours. Remove vegetables to serving dish, heaping them in the center and stand the tripe around the outer edge. Skim fat from liquid and strain. Melt 1 tbsp. butter in frying pan, add 1 tbsp. flour and brown. Cook together until well blended, add the liquid, 1 tbsp. catsup and 1 tsp. lemon juice, cook until thick and pour over the tripe and vegetables.

TOASTED PINEAPPLE "MUSHROOMS"

Cut eight rounds of bread the same size as pineapple slices. Saute the bread and eight slices of pineapple in butter until golden brown. Remove from pan and place a slice of pineapple on each round of bread. Mix together one package of cream cheese and 6 tbsps. of peanut butter, add a few grains of salt and pineapple juice enough to moisten. Spread thickly on pineapple slices and top with a marshmallow. Place under broiler flame until the marshmallows are slightly brown, but not melted. Serve with lettuce.

WINCHESTER NUT BREAD

Pour ¾ cup cold water over ½ cup brown sugar. Stir until the lumps are dissolved, add ½ cup molasses and ¾ cup milk, 1 cup bread flour and 2½ tsps. baking powder, 1¼ tsps. salt and ¾ tsp. soda (the soda, baking powder and salt having been sifted with the flour), and 2 cups unsifted graham flour, and ¾ cup walnut meats. Bake about two hours in a slow oven. The long, slow cooking is the secret of this delicious bread.

N. Y. Statesman Talks of NRA Tonight

By N. F. T.

Another important air address on "NRA Developments" is scheduled late this evening (WNAC) when Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York speaks to the coast to coast radio audience from Washington between 11:30 and 11:45 p. m.

* * *

No more vigorous legislative work along reco ery lines has been sponsored by any American than the records show credited to Senator Wagner, always an ardent co-worker with President Roosevelt. Tonight the Empire State solon will discuss progress of the Blue Eagle program to date.

NETWORK NOTES

Dorothy Thompson, distinguished among women newspaper correspondents of the world and an editorial authority on political and social conditions in Central Europe for many years, is guest personality this evening (WNAC) at 5:45 during the "Grub Street Speaks" presentation . . . So the NBC dramatic department is shaping a series of sketches called "Love in the 30th Century" to give us an idea what the strange state of being will be like and all about then—as if anybody knows now? . . . Today's prize for silly "mike" shows is the "Parrot Talking Contest" originating at the Chicago World's Fair and aired from 2:45 until 3 o'clock. On second thought a diction award candidate may be discovered at that . . . Catchiest novelty tune bit of the year to date—it's "Big Bad Wolff" methinks . . . Ed Jardon the Hub tenor, is singing at 9:30 every morning this week (WNAC) as the Yankee Network Revue attraction . . . Some snappy announcing might serve to improve local orchestra efforts. For example, the introduction from Chicago (WBZ) between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday night, calling the "Bell in the Lighthouse" just "an old song about a Girl on the Rocks" . . . Desolate out of door elements yesterday afternoon (1 to 1:30) offset indoors by the sparkling half hour (WEEI) of Morey Pearl orchestra melodies, especially those clever impressions of leading radio personalities.

ATTENTION, MEN!

Springfielders at the Eastern States Exposition opening yesterday saw Rudy Vallee togged out in full military uniform, the crooning Colonel now being a full fledged officer on the staff of Maine's Governor Brann.

* * *

Tonight's playlet in the "Theater of Today" series (WNAC) is one written by Irving Reis, a gifted chap working at the Columbia Network control board. It's called "St. Louis Blues" for reasons listeners will better understand if they tune in at 9:30 p. m.

PIANO PAIR

Brilliant two piano efforts by Fray and Braggiotti (WAAB) this evening at 8:45 include "Sophisticated Lady" as a popular contribution and selections from Wagner's "Parsifal" for classic interpretation.

Prisoners Were Loyal

Escape Foiled by Norfolk System

A group of hardened, desperate criminals attempted to effect their escape from the Norfolk State Prison Colony.

They had dug a tunnel beneath the prison walls and were ready to break out when their scheme was detected.

Their scheme was frustrated by other prisoners who reported to the prison authorities.

Norfolk State Prison Colony is designed to be the model penal institution of this country.

The prisoners are allowed more liberty than in the average prison; that is, they are not cooped up in steel cells and idle hours but are permitted to work in the gardens and grounds, in the fresh air and sunshine.

An effort is made to improve the condition of tractable prisoners, morally and physically. They are encouraged to believe that if they repent of their crime and face the future erect, they may become useful member of society again.

Among the prisoners there is a governing board, which is supposed to detect and report the infractions of the prison rules and regulations.

This board of prisoners felt that any wholesale escape from Norfolk would be an unjust reflection upon an institution whose treatment has been so kind and just. They disclosed the attempt at escape.

All this may have the appearance of a bedtime story. But it seems to be justified by the facts in the case.

There is no class of our people more deserving of considerate treatment than our erring ones who make their mistakes and are sent away for them. Many of them will repay kindness with honor. They should be given a chance when they appear to be worthy. The experiment of Norfolk should continue and be enlarged.

Smiling and Spending

Banker—Manufacturer Sees NRA Success

Albert M. Creighton, the Lynn banker and shoe manufacturer, says the NRA is succeeding. And he gives interesting facts to support his statement.

Retail sales increased 25 per cent last month in New England, and 16 per cent on the average throughout the Nation.

More than 130,000 employers have signed the President's re-employment agreement in the five northern New England States alone, and 1,000,000 consumers have signed the pledge.

Car-loadings have increased. Most important of all, says Mr. Creighton, some 2,000,000 idle people have been re-employed since the NRA went into effect.

"Now we are smiling again. Now we have more confidence. We are spending. We know we are on a new basis."

You can't measure optimism in dollars and cents but you do know that the optimism and co-operation which now exist among the people are the strongest assets which any movement or any business can have to success.

It was only five months ago that every bank in the country was closed. People everywhere were afraid they would lose their jobs. Business men, properly, were unwilling to invest a dollar for new development.

What remarkable changes in the few months that have elapsed! The banking structure has reopened on a solid foundation. Mill wheels are turning. Some 2,000,000 people back to work. You have only to see the crowds of shoppers in the stores along Washington, Summer and Tremont Streets to realize that the American pocketbook is open again; hoarding has ceased and the public are buying what they need.

The New Deal has brought that optimism to the people which Mr. Creighton well described.

Jewish New Year

Shofar to Sound Wednesday

On Wednesday the shofar or ram's horn will be blown wherever Jews assemble, the world over.

This will be Rosh Hashanah, the Day of the New Year in the Jewish calendar.

The Jew expects on that day to consider his short-comings, to pledge himself to redemption of them in the future, to forgive the offenses committed against him by his fellowman.

On this day the Jews in America, as elsewhere, may be expected to pray for continued relief from the economic adversities of the past four years just as their forbears under Moses sought relief from the ten plagues under the reign of Pharaoh.

Man builds railroads, constructs canals and flies through the air in his motorplane, but on one day of the year at least he modestly admits that he is the humble instrument of some Divine Providence without which he is powerless.

Rabbi Harry Levi will conduct the formal service on Wednesday evening in the Temple Israel, over which he has presided for more than twenty years. This good man is to be wished well on his anniversary as are his brethren throughout the country in token of the contribution which the Jews have made to the development of America.

Just Folks

An Old Fool

At seventy-five, his wife long dead,
He met a woman young and fair
And he believed her when she said:
"I like a man with silver hair."

Her voice was soft, her laughter gay.
She had a certain touch of grace
And he was pleased to hear her say:
"I like a man with wrinkled face."

For her his purse was opened wide.
He bought her gifts of every kind,
And he believed her when she cried:
"I like a man who's almost blind."

He had to walk with careful tread.
But followed as she lured him on
And he believed her when she said:
"I like a man whose strength is gone."

One glance within his looking-glass
You'd think had brought him reason cool.
But he believed the flattering lass
Until she called him: "Poor old fool!"

Feed the Birds!

By Nelson Harding

Start in this first month of Autumn,
During the days of September,
To provide well for the Eagles
For these birds depend upon you.

Don't neglect to feed them freely,
With good nourishment supply them
Throughout the Fall and Winter,
And in turn they'll help you prosper.

O. O. McIntyre

Touring New England

First Sight of Yale

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18—With returning travelers glooming about Europe, we cancelled reservations on the Europa, pushed Harry Silvey into the car, tossed the dogs in after and here we are —rambling! The colonial charm of Connecticut's countryside is especially alluring against autumn's bronze.

O. O. McIntyre

I'm somewhat a fool for white picket fences, red barns, dovecotes and sheepfolds. And here they are in profusion. Towns flash by. Litchfield, Bethel, Danbury—I lifted my hat for Tod Danbury News Man and somehow thought too, of M. Quad —Derby and this brisk city of New Haven.

In college towns I have learned to take on special deference. Any small-job man may be on the edge of a degree. I once hailed a filling station attendant as "Young Squirrel" in Berkeley. The week before he had become a doctor of philosophy at the California University.

Until this evening I had never seen Yale, whose purplish pallor shimmered so austerely in the dusk. It sprawls over a huge block close to the city's heart and fronts on a serene square. There are vinely towers and through provocative archways peeps of the campus.

The tang of wind-swept hills touched off stinging hunger. I champed to try out one of the Promaine Tommies among pawky bunches on the fringe of town. A compromise was the clattering dining room of a station. Depot restaurants are electric with expectancy of travel. Food becomes exciting.

We had a table beside a circular counter and were studying a well-thumbed menu when my wife with a gulp announced she lost her watch. Nothing else happened so far, save we blew two fires. John De Carlo, the chauffeur, broke a back tooth at lunch. I came off without a penny and both dogs refused food. We abandoned eating and wandered, like lost souls, around the station, hunting. It was found on the floor of the car. So back to vittling.

* * *

I asked a pert blonde, a double for Patsy Kelly, what would be her cuisine choices. (Bartlett's Business College '08.) She shifted gum meditatively and suggested ham and eggs. French fried potatoes, sliced tomatoes and a glass of milk. "Spoken like a true daughter of Yale," said Harry Silvey, who never got further than Ned in the Third Reader.

* * *

Afterward we drew up at the Taft. I felt vague misgivings about the dogs. Some hotels are still finicky on this side of the ocean. But we trotted them up to the register. Only ladies were back of the desk. They did not glance at the pooches, nor did elevator operators or bell boys. Times have changed.

* * *

New Haven is cupped in hills. The picturesque rim, "Sleeping Giant," northward from a hotel window, suggested attractive hiking through the rustle of dry leaves. All New England towns have a feel of permanency halved by vigorous tradition. Communism and social devices clamoring for change seem far away.

* * *

There's a puritanical purr to street names, too. I notice Chapel, Meadow, Orange, Church, Temple and Court. Aside from its big university are five other colleges. The educational urge is reflected in speech. I hailed a policeman and inquired rather clumsily direction of the hall where Nathan Hale lived. I somehow expected him to interject: "There you go splitting an infinitive."

Early we drove out to see the Yale Bowl. An empty football field looks even more desolated than an empty theater. I thought of Ring Lardner's rent the day it opened: "Gene Buck's drawing room—without lamps!"

* * *

It's warming adventure to gypsy along the open road without objective. At noon we set off again for we don't know or care where. Just floating down streams with violets in our hair. No nude book. No one home knows where we are. I have decided not to look at a newspaper. Rulers may abdicate, governments fall. Flood, famine and pestilence! But don't worry. I'll be dandy. I have my mittens. Just think of me dreaming out there under the stars, full of nomadic contentment—and plenty of red ants.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

College, Working Girl?

NOW IT'S FALL. College years are done with; vacation days are over; Janey must find a job. And how much is Janey's shiny new AB. degree going to help her in finding that job?

"MIGHTY LITTLE, IF AT ALL!" says Mrs. Esther Eberstadt Brooks.

And Mrs. Brooke should know, for she's a job finder for hundreds of girls — college graduates and otherwise — every year. Nor is she the conventional, stony-hearted employment manager. To the contrary, she's young, charming and wears herself —and likes 'em that way.

Elsie Robinson

But surely she can find these qualities ad lib in the annual crop of grads? Yes, she surely can. Pretty, poised and peppy—they're all of that. Hepped up with culture; wised up to clothes. The pride of the campus and the delight of their fond parents' hearts.

Then do they not take the business world by storm?

Yes, they do NOT!

For, in spite of all their college grooming, THEY HAVEN'T WHAT IT TAKES to crash the industrial gates. What's that? Mrs. Brooke tells you in her article "September Girl" in the September GOOD HOUSEKEEPING. Listen—

These Bachelors of Arts—they come trooping from the campuses every year, full up with culture and rosy dreams of conquering those pinnacles of business hitherto graced solely by male occupants. There is nothing wrong with either their ambition or their energy but —there is one question which almost always floors them. The question is:

"WHAT CAN YOU DO?"

The answer to that question is a brutal one. Every employer knows it—usually to his profound irritation.

THE AVERAGE SWEET GIRL GRADUATE CAN DO EXACTLY NOTHING.

She has spent the four best years of her youth, plenty of her parents' and the taxpayers' money, and boundless energy and enthusiasm, an dlin return she has acquired—what? Charming manners. Clever chatter. A superficial knowledge of a score of subjects. But rarely can she DO a single practical thing.

And whose fault is it?

"The college's!" says Mrs. Brooke.

"The college woman who succeeds in business today owes her alma mater very little thanks. She is a victim of one of the most perfect systems of unpreparedness and misguidance ever devised.

"OUR FEMALE INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER LEARNING, TWENTIETH CENTURY TO THE CONTRARY NOTWITHSTANDING, ARE STILL TAKING GIRLS FOR A FOUR-YEAR RIDE AND THEN LETTING THEM WALK—SOMEWHERE—ALONE.

"But," protests Janey with an indignant wave of her diploma, "all that is just at first. Of course a college girl makes a slower start than the girl who has always worked. But doesn't she, with her trained mind, forge ahead faster when she once gets going?"

No, Janey; she doesn't. For, even granting that college courses produce trained minds, which is open to much argument, what business needs in its working girls isn't the trained mind but the trained fist—and a well-weathered eye. An eye that knows what it's all about, not in the world of Campus Cut-ups but out in the main stream. A fist that can wallop a typewriter and swing a shorthand pad.

And these things don't happen spontaneously.

It takes months of hard drilling in a business college to learn them; months or years of practical experience in offices to develop them into a profitable technique.

"But if a girl is really awfully bright and adaptable, won't her employer be willing to give her a chance even if she hasn't had office training?" cries Janey, still unconvinced.

"Yes," might have once, but no longer," says Mrs. Brooke, adding:

"TODAY THERE IS NEITHER PLACE NOR PATIENCE WITH PLENTY OF CULTURE WITHOUT ACQUAINTANCE WITH THE RUDIMENTS OF BUSINESS. THE LEARNED BACHELOR OF ARTS HAS LITTLE CHANCE AGAINST THE INTELLIGENT HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE WITH A BUSINESS COURSE AND SOME PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE."

So just where does that lead, Janey? YOU tell!

Garner Local Loan Plan Adopted by Roosevelt

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Another Hoover policy has just been knocked into a cocked hat by his successor in the Presidency. Another Garner proposal has just been announced as a Roosevelt policy.

As a part of his three-fold program to break the credit jam in this country by compelling the extension of credit on easy terms, President Roosevelt has directed the reconstruction finance corporation to encourage industry to join in a co-operative local movement to obtain loans from the corporation on sound collateral whenever and wherever banks have been slow to accept such collateral as a basis of credit.

In order to obtain loans from the corporation under this plan, the borrowers must give assurance that the accommodation they seek is to be employed in the stimulation of constructive enterprise.

In other words, these borrowers must undertake to relend this money to enterprises that have adopted NRA codes and need money to finance the expansion of their business.

GARNER'S PLAN

This plan embodies the principles which Mr. Garner advocated as Speaker of the House and which Mr. Hoover as President indignantly rejected.

On July 5, 1932, Mr. Garner left the Speaker's chair and took the floor to report to the House upon a White House conference between the President and the leaders of the House.

At this conference President Hoover had served notice that there were certain provisions in the Garner bill for the relief of unemployment and the revival of business which he could not approve. One of these was the Garner proposal to broaden the base of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by authorizing it to make loans to private corporations with adequate security in addition to loaning to banks of all kinds, to railroad companies and other corporate institutions.

DISAGREES WITH HOOVER

All that Mr. Garner then and as Speaker of the Democratic House in refutation of President Hoover's argument against this proposal applies with equal force to support the wisdom of President Roosevelt in adopting this proposal.

Speaking to the House with great earnestness a year ago last July, Mr. Garner, who was then Speaker, said:

"Why should you not loan to a private corporation, if it has adequate security? Why should you not loan to that corporation to carry on its business and give employment to labor? Somebody ought to answer that. I yield for it. I have not found a man yet who can answer it. It can not be answered. That is the size of it exactly. You propose to increase the capital of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to $3,500,000,000 from $2,000,000,000. Now in doing so, I plead with you to let all the people have some drippings from this wonderful banking institution. Do not keep it just for a few. Let the whole people have a little bit of consideration with respect to their own money."

When, as a result of the White House conference, it became evident that the President and the Speaker could not agree on this question, Mr. Garner was urged to yield, but he refused, and addressing the President with great respect said:

"Not I, Mr. President. There is a principle involved in this that I will not surrender. I will not surrender the principle that we ought to legislate for all the people rather than for a preferential class."

This speech of Speaker Garner brought him the most scathing criticism from the Republican side of the House, from the Republican press, from Republican senators, and finally from the Republican President that Mr. Garner ever received during his 30 years in Congress.

PART OF PROGRAM

In a public statement reiterating his objections to Speaker Garner's appeal for equality of credit for all Americans with good collateral instead of limiting such credit only to corporate wealth, President Hoover said:

"Such an undertaking by the United States Government makes the Reconstruction Corporation the most gigantic banking and pawn-broking business in all history."

A lot of water has gone over the mill since then. Mr. Hoover is now a private citizen. Mr. Garner is Vice-President of the United States, and his running mate on the National ticket, President Roosevelt, proclaims the Garner proposal as a major part of the Roosevelt program.

Riffs Again Ride in the Relentless War France Is Waging Against Them in Morocco

By Edwin C. Hill

The Riffs are riding again in the war that never ends," the endless struggle of the French to subdue the fierce Berber tribesmen of the Moroccan mountains and desert. The casualty lists from across the Mediterranean are causing more than a little concern in Paris, and in one of the late lists the name of Captain Mangin appears among the slain.

American who fought in France with the First and Second Divisions will remember the name for the father of Captain Mangin was the French general who commanded the Americans and the French in the great drive from Compiegne Forest to Sedan. The victory which was the beginning of the end of the World War.

In their last savage brush with the hard-fighting, never-give-up horsemen of Morocco, the French lost 42 killed and 52 wounded before the regulars and the Foreign Legion finally beat back the hawk-like raiders. The fighting has been taking place in the Atlas Mountains, those three ranges along the northern coast of Morocco with the blue Mediterranean on the north and the endless desert on the south.

France, for which Morocco is one great granary and vineyard with inexhaustible possibilities of wealth, is determined to pacify the country —has been ever since the glamorous days that Ouida wrote about when Cigarette, the gay and gallant little vivandiere, died for love of her tall Englishman, a Lieutenant.

Four columns of French infantry and cavalry, along with artillery and a battalion of the Foreign Legion, have been engaged in the war of pacification. Against them were the fierce and fanatical tribesmen, who have the advantage of fighting on their home grounds and of being indifferent to the blazing sun and scarcity of water.

The Berbers, or Riffs, are well supplied with modern rifles and ammunition, though where they get them is a secret which the French secret service would give millions of francs to know. Somehow and on some way interests that have no love for the French land arms to the coast, from w- they are run into the desert and into the mountain retreats by means of camel caravans. Even old rifles are worth $50 apiece to the fighting Berbers and cartridges are snapped up at fifty cents each.

The little war which France is stubbornly waging against a proud and intractable race, a race whose neck cannot bend to the white man's yoke, is much like the old Indian wars of the American plains. Always it has been a war of raid and ambush, of stratagem and surprise. Interestingly enough, the fighting Berbers are not a negro race, Aryans, truly enough, with many blue-eyed, blonde men and women among them—a haughty, thin-nosed, eagle-eyed, straight-backed race. Their women, sometimes very beautiful and graceful, go unveiled, and the whole people are honest, loyal to friends, brave to the last drop of their proud blood, and devout Mohammedans. They cannot give up, remembering their smashing defeat of the Spaniards, seven years ago, when their one-time leader, Abd-el-Krim, surprised the Spanish general, Silvestre, in the mountain passes and annihilated a captured 10,000 Spanish and native troops, one of the most frightful defeats a white force ever suffered at the hands of a native enemy.

One of the legends that has grown out of that disaster to the Spanish arms is that the defeated and disgraced General Silvestre escaped from the Berbers by feigning insanity and made his way to South America, where he is in hiding. Another report is that 300 Spanish survivors have black day for Spanish arms are held captive by the Berbers.

With that defeat, which ranks with the victory of the Zulus over the British in the Battle of the Little Horn, the Berbers avenged the expulsion and slaughter of the Arabs by King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella back about the time that Columbus was setting out to discover America, and the Arabs and Isabella expelled the Arabs from Spain, to the Berbers, kin to the Arabs, in the mountains of their blood, expelled the Spanish from their fountain oases and cities of Morocco.

But Spain is done for along the Africa coast. She has no use for her. Only the military power of France can meet the tireless fighting battalion of the Riffs. France has a stake in Morocco too great to let the tribesmen balk her eventual conquest of an ancient and fertile land. Even now, with characteristic French preparation and foresight, she has engaged in a 20-year program for the complete pacification of Morocco. It has already cost her untold millions of francs and will cost her untold millions more. It has cost thousands of lives and will cost hundreds more at least. But the legions of France, in wide and sweeping movements, swing farther and farther into the hinterland, traveling like the legions of Caesar, building military roads as they go, establishing cities where their ramps have been.

To the south of Morocco is a land of desert sands and caravans and romantic, dark-eyed sheiks; of date-palms and oases and cheroot-smoking girls; of mosque and minaret and the whole flavor of the mysterious East. To France Morocco is empire and security, a granary and a vast reservoir of man power.

And in the end the Berbers must lose, short of a miracle; lose as Spain and Portugal and Switzerland have lost before the resistless advance of the white man—the white man and the machines his peculiar genius have placed in his hands. Paris now informs the world that the "pacification" is accomplished.

One wonders. The French thought so as far back as Louis Napoleon—but the Riffs, beaten one year, retreat to ride again.
